Don't Take Language For Granted

Second Opinion

By
Sam Clay

Diagrammed any good sentences lately? I thought not. I wonder if schools still teach this as a part of English grammar? (For that matter, I wonder if English is still taught?)

If you went to high school in the mid-50's or 60's, chances are you had to take English as a required course. You learned all about verbs, adjectives, the past tense and why you couldn't say "ain't."

Diagramming sentences was an important technique for teaching concepts about English grammar and composition. To me, diagramming was fun - very similar to solving a mystery.

First the verb had to be located. Then the subject. Once found, they were written down - subject first - and separated by a line.

Next you looked for the modifiers. These were words or phrases that presented more information about the verb and/or subject. After being discovered, they were placed on various lines and platforms in proper relationship to the word or words they were describing.

Once completed, a sentence that had been diagrammed had really been dissected. Cut up and rearranged, you could easily "see" how the sentence worked (or didn't work), understand the relationship of words, and, as you became more skilled in diagramming, you started to understand how words and their placement shaped thoughts.

Few of us continue to think enough about language, its construction, and its function. We take language for granted and like most things taken for granted, abuse it.

What is the function of language? And where did it come from? The latter question first.

Scholars in several disciplines have attempted to determine how man came to develop language - an oral method of communicating with one another. And as you would expect, there is no one agreed upon explanation. About the only point receiving universal agreement is that the ability to communicate orally is one of the characteristics determining whether a species is human or still animal.

So where language came from is still a mystery. But what about its purpose?

Lewis Mumford in "The Myth of the Machine" provides a unique answer to this query. He does so by asking another question: What is mankind's greatest invention?

Now think about that. What would you say is the most important "thing" that mankind has created?

Some possible answers: the wheel? Microscopes? The Xerox? The chocolate chip cookie (certainly on my list of greatest achievements)? The moon-earth space shuttle?

Brain Games Winners

The Boys Club of Virginia Beach recently won two first place trophies in the Brain Games Day at the Boys Club of Richmond. Boys Clubs throughout Va. participated. Team rosters are as follows:

First place twelve and under team: Paul Addis, spelling bee; John Routis, word game; Paul Johnson, hangman; Paul Johnson, chess; Chris Noyes, backgammon; and Scott Ryan and Paul Addis, college quiz bowl.

First place thirteen and over team: Steve Lutz, spelling; Mike Daniels, word game; David Cauling, chess; Bill Noyes,

Daniels and Doug Troop, backgammon; Doug Troop, scrabble; and Mike

Sam Clay illustrates sentence diagramming

Mumford says none of the above. He argues with breathtaking insight and eloquence that language is mankind's greatest invention. That language is his most important tool. That language and its invention allowed man to develop as a human. And that language is the base upon which all human development and civilization is based.

On a more specific level, I would add that language is compromise. It is a system of letters, symbols and sounds that we arrange in a random but agreed upon order to serve as our primary vehicle for expressing ourselves to one another.

What could be more important than a tool allowing one person to reveal himself to another. A tool that enables one to codify his deepest thoughts, fears, and joys and then to share them with someone else. It is overwhelming to me that we have such a tool.

It's amazing and saddening, then, that we take this wonderful tool for granted. Too often we forget our grandmother's admonitions to think before we speak or to think how we speak. Often the results are disastrous.

Why do we abuse language so? Why have we forgotten how to diagram sentences? What are the consequences? Stay tuned and next week you'll find out.

It won't be long until the warm breezes are blowing and many Virginia Beach residents will turn their thoughts to the great American past time, vacations! Many of us like to beat the crowds so we take a spring vacation fully expecting to return to the same house we left and finding it in the same condition we left it in. Sadly, this is not always the case. A great percentage of residential burglaries take place when people are away from their homes for an extended period of time.

Mr. and Mrs. Easy are planning their annual two week vacation to beautiful Puerto Rico. Mrs. Easy calls the society editor of one of the local newspapers to announce this festive event, secure in the knowledge that burglars can't read and even if they could, they never pursue the society pages. Meanwhile Mr. Easy has set about to secure his home for the pending trip. The first order of business is to place a house key under the welcome mat at the front door. Only his neighbor knows it's there, for use in case of an emergency, while the Easys are basking in the sun. Common sense dictates that a burglar would not look under the welcome mat because that would be to obvious! Next Mrs. Easy leaves a note for the milk man to discontinue delivery for the next two weeks. She puts this in a milk bottle outside the front door. Why bother to make a phone call!

The vacation is everything the Easys thought it would be, but they both looked forward to coming home. What they found upon their return shocked them. They had been so careful. Their home had been burglarized! Obviously, this little scenario was a fictitious representation of an all too familiar problem. Had the Easys taken the proper security measures they could have greatly reduced the possibility of a burglary occurring in their home. Securing your home does not mean you have to spend a great deal of money. The following tips can be done with little expense to you and your family:

- High quality pen-tumbler locks with flush or recessed rings properly installed cost very little more than inadequate locks.
- Inexpensive locks or stops are available which allow a window to remain open a few inches for ventilation but prevent entry.

- Sliding glass doors are your homes weakest point. Special locks are now available for these. A stick or broom handle in themselves will not make a sliding glass door completely secure.

- Burglars know more about hiding places than you do. Don't hide the key under the mat, or a note in a milk bottle. Everyone knows about the flower pot and the mail box.

- An article in a local paper - "Mr. and Mrs. Easy are embarking on an extended tour of exotic..." complete with pictures of the going away party is an engraved invitation to a burglar.

- Cancel all deliveries, and have a neighbor pick up your newspaper. Don't leave notes! Arrange for the post office to hold or forward your mail. A full mail box is a dead give away.

- Put timers on the lights in your home for staggered periods they are inexpensive.

- Ask your neighbors to keep a check on your home and not to tell inquiring strangers that you are away. Also ask them to report any suspicious goings on around your house to the police. They should record license numbers of questionable vehicles.

- Be sure all tools and ladders are out of sight and locked away. Don't provide a burglar with tools to invade your home!

These are a few things you can do to provide your family with a secure home. For further information contact the Virginia Beach Police Department. An officer will come to your house to do a security check upon your request.

Beach Police Officer
Of The Month Profile

Don Campbell

Campbell Saves Beach
Residents From Fire

The Virginia Beach Police Department Personality Profile honors Second Precinct Officer Donald J. Campbell.

Donald 25, was born and raised in Long Island, New York. After graduating from high school in 1974, he attended State University of Farmingdale, in New York, where he received his Associates Degree in Criminal Justice.

He joined the Virginia Beach Department of Police in July of 1978. Donald attended the 42nd Session of the Tidewater Regional Criminal Justice Training Center. He was assigned to, and is currently serving at the Second Precinct.

Donald is married to his lovely wife, Laura, both Virginia Beach residents since 1978.

Officer Campbell has performed professionally during his entire tenure with the Beach Police and has several letters of appreciation. Most recently, Donald was credited with rescuing six people from their burning home and has been recommended for a Departmental citation.

Officer Campbell entered a smoke filled oceanfront home early on the morning of February 22 to awaken the occupants and assist them with their escape. Once all were outside, Donald was told there was another man in a bedroom next to the flaming garage. Officer Campbell ran back in and located the man, apparently affected by smoke, and was able to lead him from the house.

Firefighters and police officials said that, without Donald's action, some, if not all, of the occupants, three of them children, might have died.

It is indeed our pleasure to profile Donald and recognize his overall job performance and highlight his meritorious life-saving effort.

After Saving Lives, Campbell
"Didn't Think Much Of It"

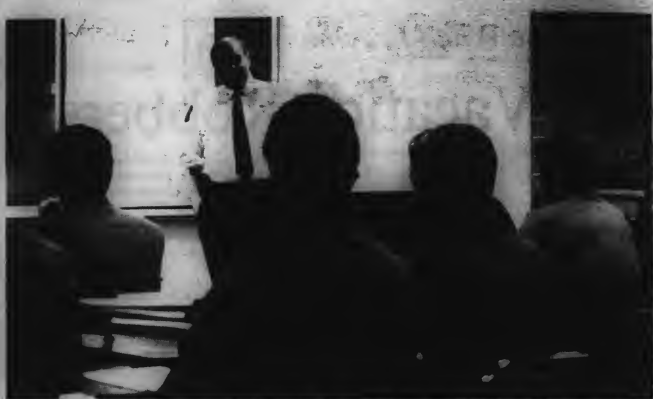

Campbell gave The Sun this reaction to his being recognized by the VBPD for his life saving heroics: "I was feeling pretty good about myself after it happened. Usually Sunday night is pretty slow, just driving around on patrol. It's not often you get a chance to save someone's life."

"... I saw an orange glow about the house, not like normal spotlights. Flames were coming from the top of the garage door. I knew there was an upstairs bedroom because I had been to the house before about a month ago on a call. I didn't know if someone was living in the garage apartment now or not. I kicked in the back door leading into the garage. I didn't see anybody but the smoke was getting thicker. I went back outside and began knocking on all the windows and making alot of noise. I got inside the house and saw a guy sleeping in the living room on the couch. It was not too smokey there. I woke him, told him what was going on and told him to wait outside. Then I learned there were three children in the house, ages three, seven and 11 and one more adult. I remember waking one of them up but he was too scared and tired to react. Their father helped get all three children outside the house at the front door. I asked if everybody was then out of the house. A man said yes, then no. His roommate was upstairs asleep. I asked directions to his room. It was down a twisty hallway. I found him in a room heavily filled with smoke. His room shared a wall with the garage where the flames were. He didn't wake up right away, but finally I got him out."

In total, Campbell rescued three adults and three children. The temperature was in the 30's outdoors and the time was about 1:30 p.m. when officer Campbell first saw the flaming north end house.

"At the time I didn't think much of it," Campbell said. "I just reacted normally. The guy in the back room could have been in trouble if he hadn't been discovered soon. The flames were beginning to run up into his room."

Campbell said his friends in the police department "made a big deal of it," but Campbell quietly states, "It was just the time of night. Nobody was around. It was just a bad time; especially on a Sunday night."

THE PASSING YEARS

Life passes by so fast, Lord,
I know I'm sure to miss
A vital part unless you keep
Reminding me of this.
There's so much that I want to do,
A lot I've left undone,
So many plans discarded,
And a few I've not begun.

Life passes by so fast, Lord,
How often I've been told,
It always does around the time
That we are growing old.
"For everything a season"
Is wise as well as just,
But I had rather wear me out,
Than fall apart with rust.

Life passes by so fast, Lord,
The days, the months, the years,
Lord keep a smile upon my lips,
And blot away the tears.
Teach me to lean upon Your arm,
When pain and sickness strike,
To tell the facts from fancies,
That sometimes look alike.

Life passes by so fast, Lord,
And yet how kind You are,
In granting me the precious
years,
That I have had so far.
So let the days grow shorter,
The darkest shadows part,
But put the wrinkles on my face,
...And never on my heart!

Born To Win?

Some people say that good printers are made, not born. But Robert Durst could disagree with that statement, if he wanted to. He was practically born into the printing business.

After graduating from the Naval Academy in 1975, Bob joined the Navy and was stationed in Norfolk for five years. In September 1980, he left the Navy and opened Rapid Reprints in Virginia Beach (across from Pembroke Mall, next to Bradley's, at 322 Constitution Avenue.)

Rapid Reprints is sort of a cross between a commercial printer and a quick printer, offering four main advantages to Virginia Beach businesses: quality, speed, layout-design service, and personalized attention. Here's how Bob explains it in his own words:

"First of all, we provide QUALITY material. Although our company is small, the quality of our work is as good or better than most of the larger commercial printers. Our monthly flyers can give you a good idea of the quality work we do.

"Next, we have the SPEED to give you a fast turnaround on your printing orders. We can give you up to 5,000 8 1/2 x 11 bond copies the same day or 10,000 bond copies within 24 hours, if you provide camera-ready copy, and if the order is received by 10 a.m.

"Third, we can give you excellent LAYOUT-DESIGN SERVICE. No matter what the printed piece is, we can do it all for you: letterheads, envelopes, business cards, brochures, flyers, business forms. All of these layouts can be as creative as you wish, since we have a great variety of typesets, screens, clip art and borders to choose from.

"We give each client PERSONALIZED SERVICE to help solve his or her printing problems. We give our clients the benefit of our experience by telling them how a certain piece can best be laid out and printed. If the deadline is close, give us a call. We'll work extra hard to give you the job on the

Bob's wife, Jan, helps him run the business, and they have one employee. Rapid Reprints is open from 8:30 to 5:30 Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Pavilion Towers Still Causing Debate

The decision to grant discounted utilities fees to the developers of Pavilion Towers was accepted by Virginia Beach City Council in time of the groundbreaking ceremonies at the convention hotel site on Tuesday.

More Council Hopefuls

Five new names have been added to the slate of those intending to run for six of 11 city council seats up for grabs in this Spring's election.

Larry L. Joyner, John Perry, H. Jack Jennings, Jr., Jean Campbell, and Tony Bruder have all announced they will run for election.

Joyner, 41, will oppose incumbent Barbara Henley in his quest for the Pungo Borough seat. He is vice president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and is on the city's industrial development authority. He is also manager of a regional distribution center for the J.C. Penney Co.

Perry, a retired school teacher, will run for the Bayside Borough seat. Bayside incumbent Clarence Holland said he is not seeking re-election. Perry retired 18 months ago after 39 years of teaching, mostly in Virginia Beach and Norfolk. He was an officer in the Virginia Beach Education Association and president of the L. & J. Gardens Civic League.

Jennings and Campbell will both seek the Lynnhaven Borough seat, currently held by E. T. "Joe" Buchanan, who is not seeking re-election. Jennings is vice president of Insurance Management of Tidewater and president of the United Way Family Center. He is a member of the Virginia Recreation Commission and on the Republican Party City Committee. Campbell is executive director of the Poseidia Institute.

Bruder, is acting director of the Poseidia Institute's counseling program and will run for an at-large seat.

Acceptance came hard, however, as tempers flared during a discussion in open meeting Monday afternoon of what had begun as a meeting on "confidential-privileged attorney-client communication" in executive session a week earlier.

The controversy over the rate discount had already led to the firing of City Manager George L. Hanbury in January. Monday, Council seemed to want to get rid of the whole matter while members parried verbal thrusts.

Council eventually agreed by a 6-4 vote to accept the opinion of City Attorney Dale Bimson that the administrative decision to apply developer fees to the first phase of Pavilion Towers is legally binding. Councilman Reid Ervin did not vote. When asked by City Clerk Ruth Smith whether he abstained, Ervin said, no, that he was not voting.

Council's action fell short of backing Hanbury's decision, and confirmed that it was legally binding.

Council also voted unanimously to instruct Bimson to bring back amendments to the fee ordinance which would clarify who was and who was not to be granted the discount; or developer's fees which are significantly lower than the normal city fee.

For the developers of Pavilion Towers, E. S. Garcia and Associates, the developer's fee means a $116,000 savings.

Hanbury granted the break to Garcia in November, but did not report the matter to Council until January after he learned of an impending news story on the discount. The position of Council was that it should have been informed at the time.

Although Hanbury's action was considered binding by Bimson, he said a new ordinance could be applied against any future applicant for a building permit, including one for the second Pavilion Towers. If the ordinance were changed to override the existing administrative interpretation, "then Pavilion Towers would appear to have no legal argument other than to allege a contractual right under the terms of the Olsson Agreement, an arguably ambiguous contract to which Garcia Enterprises was not a party."

The Olsson contract refers a transaction at the time the Pavilion site was acquired. The Olsson brothers owned the entire 54-acre parcel from which was taken the 20-acre Pavilion site. Part of his payment was that the city install utilities at no cost to him. Bimson said the

Standing Not Running

Virginia Beach Councilman Patrick L. Standing is not running for re-election to Council. Repeat, Standing is not running...

Standing made a "formal" announcement to this effect at the regular Council meeting Monday afternoon. He said that "some people have been concerned with whether I intend to run, or not run for Council."

"I assumed that everyone knew I was not going to run for Council in the May election," he said. "That is fact."

He said he enjoyed the eight years on Council, two as vice mayor and two as mayor and said that anyone who serves on Council deserves a pat on the back.

"I'm sorry I caused some concerns about whether I was running," he concluded.

Tenative Plans Set

Beach To Gain Condos, And Completed Boardwalk

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

When the $8 million Pavilion Condominiums are completed in the summer of 1983, not only will the city's Pavilion Towers gain a satellite oceanfront resort for its guests, The City of Virginia Beach will have its littoral boardwalk completed.

Under city policy, according to Virginia Beach Public Works Director Oral Lambert, when commercial oceanfront development occurs between Virginia Beach boardwalk's northern terminus, 39th Street, and its southern end, Second Street, the City of Virginia Beach agrees to build bulkheads, while developers agree to furnish the 20 foot cement boardwalk, railings, and steps leading to the sandy beach.

Presently, there is a 656 foot gap in the boardwalk between Seventh and Fourth Streets, where until recently, no commercial development had risen. In other words, the boardwalk should run from the Holiday Inn at 39th Street to the Dolphin Run Condominiums at Second Street. Except that the boardwalk was never completed between the Ramada Inn on Seventh Street and the Dolphin Run because that small strip of prime property had not developed. But all that is probably going to change.

The 656 foot gap between the Ramada and the Dolphin Run will likely be filled within the next few years as new beachfront development looms. An oceanfront restaurant and lounge named Fogg's is under construction at about Fifth Street. The restaurant owners will be required to build the boardwalk between their establishment and the ocean. South of that, between Fogg's and the Dolphin Run, the $8 million Pavilion Condominiums will be erected. The developers, Pavilion Towers Associates, Virginia Beach, will also be required to construct a boardwalk. That leaves only a couple hundred feet of beach, between Fogg's and the Ramada Inn; that is not assured of boardwalk. But, according to Lambert, discussions are underway to finish the boardwalk completely.

"The city is responsible for putting the bulkhead now in front of Fogg's," Lambert told The Sun. "We looked at the site and saw that there was only a small section of the beach without the bulkhead and boardwalk. I decided it would be foolish to go through the expense of building the bulkhead just in front of Fogg's," knowing that Pavilion Condominiums are coming. We'll probably build the bulkhead filling in the entire gap, if we can reach agreements with the adjacent property owners to reimburse the city later for the bulkhead construction we would undertake now."

Lambert said to build the bulkhead to fill the 656 foot gap would cost the city $168,848. Developers would have to pay a total of $139,000 to build the boardwalk along the same strip of beach. Lambert also said that plans to complete the boardwalk are for now only tentative.

The boardwalk now ends abruptly at Seventh Street, picking up again at Third Street. Future oceanside development will fill the boardwalk's missing gap

While the Pavilion Towers is still capturing local headlines, plans for its resort oceanfront satellite facility Pavilion Condominiums are quietly proceeding.

The condos will be located between Fourth and Fifth Streets on a 150 by 200 foot oceanfront lot. Oceanfront land sells for between $4,000 and $5,000 per linear foot. The Pavilion Condos' lot alone costs between $800,000 and $1 million. Ground breaking for the $8 million condos is expected this summer with a construction completion date in June, 1983.

Included for condo residents and guests of the Pavilion Towers will be a third floor Pavilion Towers Beach Club, consisting of an olympic sized pool, with over 11,000 square feet of outdoor decking. Over 180 feet of the deck will be adjacent to the oceanfront providing a clear and unobstructed view of the beach and boardwalk areas.

An interior lounge/bar will seat 90 persons with beverages also being served to the pool deck area. A 900 square foot game room will also be provided for card playing and other passive activities.

Men's and women's locker rooms will be provided, primarily for the hotel guests. They will contain showers, changing areas and lockers for clothes storage.

"This part of the condos is really to compliment the Pavilion Towers," said Virginia Beach developer Michael Gelardi.

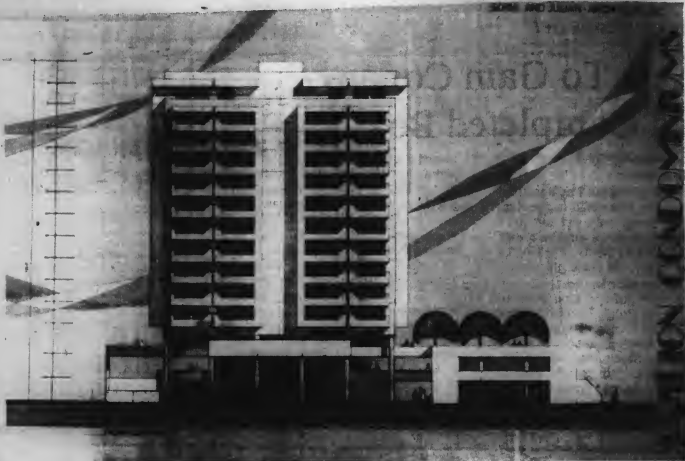

The Pavilion condos will rest on a concrete pile and grade beam foundation. The exterior skin will be a mixture of rose hued precast concrete panels and bronze tinted glass.

The condos will include 55 units, and parking will be provided on the first two levels. The beach club will be on the third, along with a snack bar and game room.

A security and paging system will be provided for condo residents to screen visitors. Each condo will be provided with an exterior balcony with a storage closet for outdoor furniture. Units will have individual trash compactors and washer and dryer hookups, as well as individual mechanical and electrical systems.

Guests at Pavilion Towers wishing to use the beach club will have their own entrance on the south side of the condos.

The six units on the top 13th floor of the Condos will be penthouses, each one two story with a roofed terrace and fireplace. Penthouses will sell for about $300,000 each. Cable television will be an option to condo residents.

Artist's rendering of proposed $8 million Pavilion Condominiums

The Pavilion Condominiums will encompass a total of 88,000 square feet, and when fully operational will employ between 20 and 40 full and part-time employees.

"We feel that the condos will not only be an excellent complement to the Pavilion Towers and the arts and conference center," Gelardi said, "we are also proud that we are assisting in the completion of the Virginia Beach boardwalk."

Architect for the Pavilion Condominiums is Jose Francisco Soria, Architect PC, 4504 Colley Avenue, Norfolk.

Boardwalk History

Boardwalk First Built In 1888, Made Of Wood

The first Virginia Beach boardwalk was made of wood in 1888, stretched from 14th to 16th streets and burned down on June 10, 1909. It was replaced by concrete in 1926, built much as we know it today. It was financed by a $250,000 bond secured by the Citizens Virginia Beach Walkway Corporation.

The Ash Wednesday storm on March 7, 1962 severely damaged the boardwalk, tearing holes in it and ripping it at several places. It was rebuilt and reinforced. The 2.9 mile boardwalk stands today from Second Street to 39th Street.

Pavilion Towers Ground Broken

Ground has been broken for the Pavilion Towers, the hotel complex designed to complement the Pavilion Arts and Conference Center.

Muhammad Ali turned the first shovel this week as Virginia Beach dignitaries, city officials and reporters looked on. Ali owns one-third interest in the hotel, according to developer Michael Gelardi.

Ali received a stained glass replica of the city seal as a token for his support.

Speeches were made, including one by the city director of economic development A. James Bellis.

Virginia Beach Nightlife

Rock and Roll Lava Boils Beacher's Blood

Sun Down

By
LYNN SANDS

For many Virginia Beach residents the final week of February represents the last gasp of winter. It is the end of a depression carried on by cold wave after cold wave. Suddenly, just when all hope has been abandoned, February with its fewer days abruptly stops, and March lurches forward. March introduces Spring. It is left up to Spring to take the stage. Warm waves patiently await their turns behind the curtain.

For many people the final week of February is the same as the Fourth of July. These are the people who never noticed the winter, who never became depressed by the cold, and who never deserted hope because they weren't afraid to boogie. They let the hot flow of rock and roll lava boil their blood. The music seeps into their minds and drips into their veins. They boogie relentlessly as they defy misery and boredom in favor of the fun and excitement of the nightlife. These are the people my date and I see in the bars and hangouts of the resort city every week.

Shack
Tuesday night my date and I "dropped by" the Shack. As cold as it was there were bodies bouncing outside while the hot rock and roll of the Nerve was sweeping everyone off their feet inside. One of the kids, Jerry, was there, and Prisi was smiling her lips off. The Nerve will be playing at Going Bananas in Richmond every Sunday in March. Their new T-shirts are beautiful.

My date and I went to The Shack for dinner Friday night. Some tables have been removed downstairs and the lighting was different from the way it was before. Tom Twite was spinning some oldies for a big crowd. Our Shack steaks were marinated and cooked to perfection. The baked potatoes were delicious, and my date had an incredible Shack drink.

Later, we went to Pascal's where Tom Cakes was treating the throng to some great songs by The Producers. Pascal's was standing room only as the crowd danced and boogied away. There's no room for tourists in this resort city landmark.

Stewart
Rod Stewart hit town

on Sunday. There was a large, bubbly audience for this performer who stands alone behind Elvis as the male who has been at the top of the pop charts with solo hits longer than anyone. Our special correspondents, Doctor Dog and Carol, reported that the crowd was literally singing for him the whole time as he pranced around the stage. First he was wearing yellow pants with tiger stripes. Then he changed into hot pink pants. The rabid fans were foaming at the mouth as he sang, danced, and kicked soccer balls into the Scope night.

Rogue's

At Rogue's later in the evening the Band of Oz were the wizards of merriment as they put on a show for the beach music crowd. Long Island Steve was in a partying mood and Debbie, Donna, and Brenda were booging to the max. Bobby and Sherry stopped by after the Stewart concert. It was a great night.

Monday my date and I had a Kuey Garden's dinner. Johnny's Chinese cuisine is unbelievable. The foo yung is out of this world, and the moo goo gai pan is scrumptious. See you after The Sun goes down.

Glass and Webb

In Musical Comedy

Virginia Beach Actors Might Exchange Mates

Carl Glass, left, as Alvin and Allen Webb as Wally, both Virginia Beach residents, ponder the merits of exchanging mates in the Broadway musical comedy, "I Love My Wife," playing Tuesdays through Sundays at the Tidewater Dinner Theatre through April 18. Glass performed in the Panama Canal Zone while stationed there as a U.S. Army communications specialist, and was active in community theatre in Montclair, New Jersey. He was first seen at TDT playing triple comedy roles in "Heaven Can Wait." Webb, a freshman at Virginia Wesleyan College, plans a theatre-communications major. A graduate of Princess Anne High School, he appeared there in productions of "Godspell" and "The Miracle Worker." The Tidewater Dinner Theatre is located in the Quality Inn-Lake Wright motel complex at 6270 Northampton Blvd., just off I-64. Group rates are available, also discounts to the military through Special Services. For information and reservations, call 461-2933 or 245-8304 toll-free from the Peninsula.

Council Determines Reduced Fees OK'd

transaction was really a "swap" but the effect was the same as if Gibson had gotten cash from the city for the land, hired a contractor to put in utilities to city standards and then donated those utilities to the city to become an asset of the enterprise system. The Public Utilities enterprise system is what makes the Utilities Department self-maintaining.

The Pavilion Towers property was purchased by Garcia from the Gibsons and the developer's stand is that the agreement goes with the land.

When Mayor D. J. Henry McCoy Jr. made his regular report for an executive session Monday afternoon, Councilman Patrick L. Stauding said he would second the motion except for the fact that he would "read in the paper" the next day about legal discussions which were supposed to be confidential.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland said he felt the same way.

"This is really a legal matter," McCoy said.

An executive session to discuss a legal matter is acceptable under the Freedom of Information Act.

Councilman John A. Beum then asked for a show of hands from Council to find out how many members had not talked to reporters after last week's executive session. Only two failed to raise their hands—Reid Ervin who was absent from the meeting in question and did not have a copy of the legal opinion, and Robin McClellan.

An attention turned to the letter which he said, "you didn't want to discuss it in closed session so where would you discuss it?"

Councilwoman Barbara Hensley said, "I would like to discuss it in open session."

Ervin said he read the newspaper article and assumed the news was accurate.

Council then voted for an executive session 10-1 with Meyers Oberdorfer dissenting but agreed to discuss the Pavilion Towers matter in open session at the end of the regular agenda item.

At the start of the discussion, Beum looked out over the sparse audience and noticed Michael Gelardi, vice president of E. S. Garcia and Associates, sitting there. "I'm sure," he said, "Mr. (Grover) Wright (Garcia attorney) has written confidential information. If you bring it up here, we'll put it in the paper and we'll be even."

Councilman Reid Ervin said he had questions that concerned him.

City Attorney Dale Beum said the considerations surrounding the Pavilion Towers are complex and unique.

Ervin said he had talked to several attorneys and that they agreed with Beum's opinion but that before applying the rule, Beum should have gone into the record for similar cases.

Beum said he had two or three examples. He also said the Enterprise Fund went back 14 years.

Giles Dodd, interim city manager, said the city has had the utilities enterprise fund since 1953.

Ervin said that Council is not tied to perpetuity to the current policy. He said that whether it was the capital fund or the enterprise fund, it all involved taxpayers' money and references should be made to anything that cost the taxpayers money.

Hensley said the proposed ordinance should address how the administration has been applying the fee rates, describe the enterprise fund and federal grants and other funds. "Why present an ordinance which is silent in those areas and doesn't describe how utilities got paid for?"

Beum said that while with the Federal government he found that the government ended up with a tremendous burden of regulations. "I don't think anyone anticipated Pavilion Towers or an agreement with the Gibsons Brothers." He said he was more specifically concerned with the wrong things but with being informed. "Anything if for something that will not happen unless it is not necessary," he said. "An attempt to pass different legislation for the second tower is aimed at one owner would result in a slight narrow law which would give the city some difficulty defending, he said.

Ervin said the rule ordinance's need clarification. He then said that people might for reduced benefits need to be spelled out. "I don't think it's the end," he said. Ervin said that the rationale behind the reduced rates is that construction which promotes tourism is beneficial to the city and should be encouraged with some bonus. He said other developers will make the same claims, that their projects will help tourism.

Councilman E. T. Buchanan, said that convention centers to be successful need several features—a large ballroom, banquet hall, 20 small rooms and 10 to 15 suites. He said the design of the Pavilion left out the 20 small rooms and the suites. He said it was an oversight or an assumption that the private sector would provide the missing parts. If the latter is the case, he said, the ordinance don't necessarily need to be modified to suit this case.

Ervin returned that he couldn't believe that the designers, Walter Nash Odell Associates, who design convention centers and arenas all over the country, overlooked these requirements.

Hensley said she thought Council would be discussing amendments to the code with a view to a decision. "Standing still," he said.

As it is now, Beum said, Public Utilities Director Aubrey Watts would not know how to calculate the developer's fee. The Utilities Department determines which fee schedule applies subject to review and/or order by the city manager.

Hensley said the provision seems liberal. She said perhaps the intent is for the provision to be liberal but that Council should review the ordinance to see if it wants to remain that liberal.

"Council ought to make a decision," Stauding said, "and not be a dead horse. When I got back (he had been on a month's vacation until last week) everybody was uplight and nobody was talking to anybody. That's not doing the city any good."

Ervin said, "You're absolutely right." He added, concerning the question of rescinding the original decision, he was "content with Beum's explanation." He said the Council would be in a dangerous ground to try to rescind anything that happened.

Vice Mayor Harold Heischberger said he agreed with Stauding. "What has been done has been done," he said and the discounted rates for the first phase of the hotel should be approved.

"If the legal intent should be spelled out that's what we should do," said Ervin.

McCoy noted, "If it's a question about how to word the agreement."

Heischberger then moved to accept the legal opinion of Beum and confirm that granting the lower fees for water and sewer were proper.

Ervin said that the motion might create problems for Beum later. "Let the decision lay where it is," he said.

Beum agreed that the decision has been made by the administration and unless Council wants to overturn it to "let it be."

McClellan said, "This thing is done. Let's move ahead."

Stauding said that the matter should be clarified for the developers. "If I were sitting down there," he said, "I wouldn't know how to make a decision."

Ervin then said he wanted proof "we are really in the first phase."

Holland added, "If I were a leader I would have an swiftly hand. We want to go ahead and put this whole matter to rest and then get to the ordinance—personally I would have an awful sneaky night (he uncertainty) would give me some hesitation."

Heischberger persisted with his motion that the fees were granted administratively were proper.

Beum said even if he disagreed he would have to accept the attorney's opinion as a practical matter. He said he was uncomfortable that the city attorney asked for a professional opinion and then it was given to the press.

Holland wanted to add to the motion that the City Attorney return in two weeks with amendments that would apply to the remaining Pavilion property as well as others.

Hensley said she did not dispute the administration's authority to make the decision originally. "That's done." But she said the had difficulty agreeing with Holland's motion.

Holland said he was trying to go to Attorney Grover Wright's letter, requesting discount rates on the second tower.

"As a Council," Stauding said, "we have to establish a policy for the people who work here every day."

Heischberger said he was just trying to get Council to agree to approve the administration's action so that the developer can get along with his project.

Councilwoman Meyers Oberdorfer went back to Sept. 20, 1976 when the city manager called Council to discuss Council to Council. She said Council did not see the contract the following week and then Councilman John Griffin moved that no action be taken until Council see the entire contract. The motion failed with only Reid, Griffin, McCoy and Oberdorfer voting in favor.

McCoy said the initial plans and four alternatives were never shown to Council. "The problem is not with your motion, but the way it's been handled since 1976." She said the ordinance should spell out who gets the developer's fees so the policy may be applied equitably. "I will not be steamrollered into voting for things that take more study."

McCoy said he was opposed to the Pavilion at the start, but that it is now built and if the city now needs a hotel, he planned to vote for the motion.

Oberdorfer said that the decision had been made to waive the fees and that a motion was not needed.

Stauding said that if Council is a policy-establishing body but actions need to be made every day.

Ervin said it was a question of ordinance, that had nothing to do with "Mr. Gelardi's problem." "We don't need to worry about Pavilion Towers. It's a fact accompaniment."

"In any other circumstances," Stauding said, "we would be falling all over ourselves to get that hotel there. If Council Hilton were there."

"Council Hilton is not going to come in this substantially environment," returned Ervin.

Heischberger said the ordinance needs work. "All I'm saying is accept the city attorney's work, with respect to the first phase."

Buchanan seconded the motion. Hensley, W. H. Kitchin III, McClellan and Oberdorfer dissented. Ervin said "no."

Beum said of amendments to the ordinance, getting more and more in detail will not speed up the process.

Oberdorfer started to make a substitute motion to Holland's motion to consider ordinance changes, only to find they were talking about the same thing.

Beum pointed out that the administration has made decisions on rates when the building permit is applied for.

Holland, reacting to Oberdorfer, said that he tries to give his best judgment to a matter, that he was not an attorney and will take the best advice from the city attorneys, administrators and others.

Ervin said he understood what Holland said.

"I said I was willing to make the best decision," Holland said.

Beum, over the speaker about politics, said, "We can propose any changes during a public hearing. It's good politics." He related an incident from past decisions. "We use taxpayers money to play games," he said.

Ervin who was involved in Beum's story, snapped back, "If you're going back into history, put it into context."

Buchanan then called attention back to the subject matter and Council approved Holland's motion. Immediately afterward Council went into executive session to discuss another legal matter and rest estate.

Clay Gives Personal Impressions

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Edwin S. "Sam" Clay III openly admits his love for Virginia Beach, its residents, and even recalls cherished childhood memories of visiting the resort city which later in his life offered him, in his words, "the greatest job in the world!"

"My family came to Virginia Beach every Summer for vacation," Clay, a 36 year old Blackstone native said. "I've seen pictures of me at the beach when I was a baby holding a sandpail and shovel. I can remember initially being afraid of ocean waves."

Clay missed his high school senior night party in Virginia Beach. His grandfather died. But he came back permanently in 1967, living in the posh North End on 87th Street. He was 22 years old, teaching at Virginia Wesleyan College, directing its library and driving down Shore Drive 20 minutes to work.

Three years later, Clay was hired to direct Virginia Beach's public library system. Four years after that he was hired as an assistant to former Virginia Beach City Manager George Hanbury, in charge of public information. His duties later expanded to include human resources. The rest is history.

Clay will leave his Virginia Beach townhouse in late March or early April. His personal opinion column, "Second Opinion" will continue regularly in The Sun, the last regular installment in the Wednesday, April 7 issue. Clay will continue to forward columns thereafter.

Clay traveled last weekend, March 5 through 7, to northern Virginia in search of another townhouse. "I rather like townhouses," he said. He won't say exactly how much more he will earn as system-wide director of libraries in affluent Fairfax County, but he makes a little over $43,000 a year now and says his new salary will be "substantially higher."

Whether or not Clay is a chronic polymath is uncertain. But if holding a master's degree in library science is any indication of a person of great and diversified learning, give Clay a wink.

Talking with Clay, one wonders how long his ebullience can continue. As if constantly feasting on ambrosia, Clay nurtures an exuberant mind, craving creativity and challenges.

What impressions has Clay mentally conjured while nesting in Virginia Beach? Is he really a snob? Does he plan to enter politics? What's it really like in the city manager's office? These questions, and others like them, were asked of Clay by the Sun. Questions and answers ensue. Many of these questions, be mindful, should have been asked of Clay all along, but weren't.

Q: Sam, as you leave Virginia Beach what emotional impressions do you harbor?

A: There are different impressions, depending on the role you assume. Bureaucratically, I look at buildings today that weren't standing before. There are new complexes; additions, sewer plants, pump stations. I drive around and see a location where a ribbon was cut, or a ceremony took place.

Personally, I became an adult here. I did a lot of growing in Virginia Beach between the ages of 22 and 36.

Culturally, there is tremendous growth in this area. They symphony. The Opera. Arts.

Q: How and why did you get a job in the city manager's office?

A: Former City Manager Roger Scott hired me to serve as director of libraries and information. I came into the city manager's office at George Hanbury's request. I guess he wanted me to officially become a part of his staff.

Q: Why?

A: He saw confidence. Plus I think they look for other qualities in a person, such as if that person is a good logical thinker. Or if he has a good analytical mind. I realized the city was developing and sometimes advice on a general nature was sought. I had a lot to do with information and George wanted a strong link between his office, public information, the community and the media.

Q: Sam, what in the heck is "human resources?"

A: Organizations such as social boards, community boards, councils on aging, Camp Pendleton project, child care centers.

Q: Do you feel a lot of tension working in the city manager's office?

A: There's an incredible amount of tension. At first it's subtle. But friends of mine who have come by the office ask me later when we're out to lunch, "how do you stand the tension in that office?" They hear the phones ringing and see everybody hopping. It is draining.

If you work in this office you are a public individual. That means the public knows everything you say, the memos you write or your salary. Working in this office is like having 280,000 bosses.

Q: What motivates you?

A: Me. I am my own worst enemy. I put pressure on myself. I try to spend every minute of the day in the most productive way possible. I constantly ingest great amounts of information. I read all the papers. It makes a difference in Virginia what happens in Saudi Arabia. I also read all the civic organization newsletters.

Q: Can you count some of the toughest times in the city manager's office?

A: The most demanding times were during the bond referendums. Every

Edwin S. Clay III

"I believe the world's toughest job is that of serving on Council. Most people have no idea how hard it is!" - Sam Clay morning we got up early and went around to make presentation. It was a $39.9 million bond sale. There was a lot on the line and we had to push an information campaign.

Q: Sam, were you George Hanbury's "right-hand-man?"

A: I felt very close to George, and felt he depended on me. I was a key individual in his office.

Q: What were the funniest things to happen to you while working in the city manager's office?

A: One day I came in and then tore off again in my car to make a presentation. I was roaring down the road, only to realize I hadn't the slightest idea where I was going.

Q: Where were you heading?

A: To the oceanfront if I remember. But I had to stop, go to a payphone, call the office and find out where I was supposed to be. I was, I found out, nowhere near where I was scheduled.

Another day, I had my calendar book turned to the wrong day, and was

Then one time, I showed up at a church for an hour long bond presentation. I gave it and after it was over they told me I had come a week early.

Q: Is there a lot of socializing in the city manager's office?

A: When we come to work we're there to work. There is very little socializing between the people while they're in the office or out.

Q: How do you personally handle the tension of the city manager's office?

A: The key to life is having a sense of humor. That's the release. Maybe I have different viewpoints than others.

Q: What has been the most rewarding aspect of working in Virginia Beach?

A: The people. The 1,000's of nice people. They're nice, I know. It's a challenge to address a hostile civic league. You know they won't all be your friends or that they'll understand, but it's gratifying to know if you have helped any people understand, or have stimulated their interest. Every individual is important and should be listened to.

Council/Manager Gov't Is Best

Q: Sam, why are you going to Fairfax?

A: Curiosity. To accept another challenge. I got a feeler from the county last November or October. I made a few calls and thought it might be something to it.

I have the greatest job in the world. It got to a point where I had to decide whether I really wanted to go or not. I had to decide because I was tying people's time up. I had to decide if they would be challenging and fun. They have a first rate library system and were looking for someone skilled in the library sciences and also skilled in management.

Q: What is your professional goal?

A: To always be in an interesting and challenging profession. My idea of Hell would be to work in a job you hated.

Q: If you hadn't been what you are, what would you like to be?

A: A symphony conductor? Director at a national museum? In a job where you can always continue to grow and be around others from whom you can learn.

Q: Why is style important in today's society?

A: I don't know if style is important but quality is very, very important. Things should be first rate. Not the highest price, necessarily but well made and functional. Something that will endure and have meaning.

Q: Do you purchase your clothes out of town?

A: No. Local men's shops. Some catalogues in New York and Dallas. But you can get most anything you want in Virginia Beach.

A: Autumn colors. Tans. Golds. Oranges. Yellows.

Q: What is your hat size?
A: I don't know. I don't own one. I tried to get a chauffeur's cap one time. They look sharp but I can't get one big enough.

Q: Do you agree that a failure to communicate was the reason George Hanbury was fired?

A: I'd rather not comment.
Q: What does Virginia Beach need to succeed in the future?

A: I think the Council/Manager form of local government is by far the best plan for this city. But to have an effective system you must make two presuppositions: First, that you have a strong, informed, cohesive council. One with vision and direction. Secondly, you must make sure Council appointments efficient department heads.

I believe the world's toughest job is that of serving on city council. Most people have no idea of how difficult it is. Or how much responsibility there is on them. It's like running a $250 million a year corporation. They can't duck it. Council is where the buck stops. Plus, whereas state and federal officials can be reached, sometimes, you can see your council member at the Safeway.

Q: Sam, would you come back to Virginia Beach to work?

A: Certainly I'd come back. Either for the city or with a private concern.

Q: Do you have the credentials to be a city manager?

A: Yes.

Q: Why was Hanbury fired?

A: The city manager served at the pleasure of the council for whatever reason the council became displeased with him.

Q: Will the city's public image stabilize after this Spring's election?

A: A corporation of this size has a gained momentum over the years, and it's hard to change. It's like an oceanliner that has maintained a certain pace for years. It's easier to change course, but it takes a while to stop. After it does stop it takes a while to get up speed again.

Virginia Beach officials must come to grips with the responsibility that is theirs. What is the responsibility of the city, and that of its residents? Every request for service must be carefully considered.

The city will have to go through constant change. Reassessing what needs to be done. In certain cases today's assumptions are outdated. No longer does the average American home have two adults and two children. If people work all day when they have time to come to City Hall? Maybe we should look at our hours of operation, and change them to 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. After all, who do we work for?

Q: What are your favorite foods?
A: French or Italian. Veal or crabmeat.

Q: Had you ever had anything published regularly in a newspaper before "Second Opinion"?

A: No. I did a few book reviews for The Virginian Pilot. A piece on bookstores in Metro. I was editor of my college newspaper and handbook.

Q: So "Second Opinion" is your first regular newspaper column?

A: Yes. I thought at first I was being too heavy with it. Then I thought I was being too light. I feel I am getting better as a writer as I go along. Writing is a good discipline and exercise for me. I have many thoughts and it's a challenge to get others to think. Not necessarily agree.

Q: You understand, of course, the importance of a community newspaper?

A: Community newspapers can be more leisurely, and spend more time on its subjects, and write more features on people.

Community newspaper fill specific needs in the community. People living along the beachfront have certain interests. Garden clubs have other interests. PTA's have still others. And all of them are often overlooked in the daily newspapers. Community newspapers make the community. I've been driving on Saturdays and seen hundreds of people working on a special community activity or event, and I know community newspapers report on them. They fill a very specific need.

Q: Sam, are you a snob? (He was publicly accused of being one after his spicy denunciation of Mexican food in his column.)

A: Yes! (Clay laughs)

Q: In that case, how long have you been one?

A: Forever. Ever since I can remember people have never criticized me. I'm perfect. (Sam is just joking.)

But seriously, being a snob is really a question of quality. If being a snob means not having time for second rate things, then I guess I am a snob. There are too many genuinely interesting things and people in this world to waste time on those who don't think. I want to be with people I can learn from. People may turn off to that type of attitude. But if they do it's probably because of their own inadequacies. I have never, however, made any pretense of being better than anybody.

Q: Are you ready for your Fairfax job?

A: Yes. They've sent me two UPS boxes of materials to help orient me to the system and a dictating machine.

Q: Will you return to visit Virginia Beach?

A: It's only three to four hours away. I plan to return frequently.

Q: What memory will you cherish most about Virginia Beach?

A: The people I've known, and the feeling that I've helped someone.

Q: What memory will you cherish least?

A: Knowing that there were people that I didn't get to.

Q: Who will be your immediate boss in Fairfax?

A: The county executive, the board of supervisors, and library board. The county executive is like the city manager and the board of supervisors is like city council.

Q: What will your new duties include?

A: Assuming basically a leadership role. Do some public relations. Achieve some momentum and direction in the system. It is already an excellent system but I hope to make it even better.

Q: Are you using this new job as a professional stepping stone?

A: I'm making a long-term commitment there.

Q: Does the local press exert too much pressure on local leaders? Is it unfair?

A: Newspapers have every right in the world to judge people as long as they do it on the editorial page. The relationship between the press and local government is like anywhere. The Press feels officials are hiding something. The City feels the Press is unfair. The Press does, however, give credibility to individuals who don't warrant it.

Q: What do you think about a field of 25 candidates in this year's councilmanic election?

A: It's healthy to see that many names put forward.

Q: Would you ever consider a political career?

A: Maybe later in life.

Q: What are your vices?

A: Too nice. Social drinker. Over eat upon occasion. Short tempered. Demanding.

Q: What do you hate most in people?

A: People who won't or don't think. Even worse, those who have exceptional ability and waste themselves.

Q: Why have you turned out the way you have?

A: My parents, and the way I was raised. The older I became the more I realized how much I owe them.

Q: How tall are you. How much do you weigh?

Does the City not have flooding, or riots, or ghettos, or the poor, because they're called something else?

Second Opinion

By
Sam Clay

Last week I tried to convince readers that language is Mankind's greatest invention. Armed with this magnificent tool - the tool that many scientists consider to be the factor dividing humans from animals - one is able to share thoughts, joys, and fears with someone else.

My concern for language is that most people take it for granted. We fail to remember (or realize) that it is an incredible asset and, accordingly, we treat it shabbily.

Why do we abuse language so? What are the consequences of this abuse? Let's look and see.

Consequences of abuse are easier to detect than why we do. We begin with them, then.

On a personal level, people communicate with one another through language. We do this daily in our conversations with family, friends, and co-workers. We rarely resort to writing to express ourselves to another.

And rarely do we speak in full phrases. Novels and movies would have us believe we speak in neat, perfectly constructed paragraphs. The truth is that for the most

Beach Teams Take Step Forward

By Ronnie Greene and Joey Carothers

When First Colonial lost to Eastern district champion Maury 70-63 in the Eastern Region Tournament semifinals, the 1981-82 basketball season came to an end for Beach district schools.

Earlier in the Eastern Regional tournament, Kempsville fell to Warwick to end the Chiefs' season.

The losses in the tournament concluded a somewhat surprising year for Beach schools.

Considered at almost a lower level than Eastern and Southeastern district schools in previous years, the 7-member Beach district took strides towards reaching the same level of play as the other districts.

For example, the opening night for area high schools saw Beach members surprise their non-district foes by winning all four games against the likes of Maury, Lake Taylor, and Granby.

In fact, sixth-place Cox twice beat the Commodores (who will play in the State semi-finals this weekend), this year, both times knocking them from the number one ranking in the Tidewater area coaches poll.

Kellam, the team that stunned then number 10 Granby, went on to pull off a few more surprises before people started taking the Knights seriously.

Along the way to their first ever .500 season (10-10), Kellam knocked off Kempsville and Princess Anne to qualify for the Beach district playoff.

First Colonial's victory over Lake Taylor was not a major upset, as the Patriots were actually rated second in the coaches poll before the season.

The ranking proved appropriate for First Colonial, as they went on to win the district with an unblemished 12-0 Beach record and a 10-5 overall mark.

Not only were the Patriots the best team in Virginia

Beach, they boasted the best player in the City, Darryl Dozier, who was named Beach Player of the Year while scoring 17.5 points per game.

Kempsville, the final team of the four that opened the season with non-district victories, continued its solid play and finished second in both the regular season and the Beach tournament to First Colonial.

The Chiefs were paced by scoring machine Todd Black, an All-Beach first team selection with an 18.5 average.

Although Beach representatives had some very good nights on the court, there were still some sour spots to the district more known for its football and baseball teams than its basketball.

Take, for instance, those Falcons of Cox High School.

A team talented enough to be picked as a serious challenger to First Colonial, before the season the Falcons secured an even stronger club when 6'4" Paul Kinley transferred from Kellam to fill in at the much needed center post.

When Cox followed their season opening victory by beating Princess Anne, the Falcons moved to the top of the polls.

But Cox never seemed to play as a unit thereafter, and lost so many important Beach games that their victories over non-district powers Maury and later Warwick didn't take much heed.

It is very hard to figure out how a team with so much talent as Cox (first team All-Beach Paul McGovern, second team All-Beach Leonard Goffigan, Kinley,) could wind up sixth place in a seven team district.

Although Beach teams did take steps towards reaching the power of the Eastern district teams by winning those season openers and a few more games on the way, their foes from the city of Norfolk proved to still be the strongest district by winning their final six meetings against Beach schools.

Princess Anne played inconsistently and finished fourth with a 6-6 Beach record.

The other two teams from Virginia Beach, Green Run and Bayside, finished fifth and seventh, respectively.

The Stallions were a team without patience, running and gunning until their arms got so sore they couldn't do it anymore.

But a team with Green Run's style of play - score as many points as possible and hope the other team doesn't score more - usually comes out on the short end of the score, as the Stallions did.

Even with sharp-shooting Jimmy Darby on the floor, Green Run could do no better than 5 and 7 in the district.

Bayside was a team without a quality player - as evidenced by their two win 10 loss district record.

Next season, Beach schools will hopefully continue to gain ground on their rivals from Norfolk and Chesapeake.

The feelings here is that this year was a step forward for the Beach district and that teams such as First Colonial, Kempsville, and Kellam will keep improving until one day schools from other districts will be looking up, not down to Virginia Beach.

No Flooding Here - Nuisance Ponding

part we speak in short, incomplete phrases and cliches. But this isn't the problem. It's our carelessness with these phrases that is.

How often has someone said to you "How are you today?" And your reply: "Fine thanks!" Or how many times have you been told to: "Have a nice day?" (I personally intend to do something obscene, painful, or both to the next person who cheerily - they're always disgustingly cheery - says this to me).

What has happened to these phrases, and to so much of what we say, is that they have lost their meaning. The person asking you how you are could care less. (To prove this, begin to tell someone exactly how you do feel when they ask. Watch them start squirming). And you know that they could care less when you say that you're fine - though you may be feeling like hell.

There are hundreds of examples of this. If we stop to think about it - and we should - we would be shocked. But why do we misuse words so? Are we so afraid to having to discover another person or expose ourselves to someone else that we hide behind these trite phrases. Language can provide a good shield.

Individuals don't have the monopoly on meaningless communication. Institutions do also. Nowhere is this more prevalent than in municipal bureaucracies.

Several years ago, residents of a new Virginia Beach subdivision contacted the city to complain about flooding. Everytime it rained, they protested, their streets would fill up, then their yards, and then, before they knew it, their homes. They wanted some relief from this situation and thought that the city should help them out.

Accordingly, a study was made of the area. The result was most interesting. It seems that these residents were not suffering from flooding after all. No, the problem they were having was "nuisance ponding."

You heard it right folks, "nuisance ponding." (Can't you picture the signs now - CAUTION, NUISANCE PONDING!) In a similar fashion, what you and I would call a small scale riot that occurred was described in yet another staff report as a "spontaneous outburst of youthful enthusiasm."

Ghettos and substandard neighborhoods become "target communities." The poor and the handicapped are magically transformed into "special need populations."

Now what's going on here? In my opinion the answer is simple. It is deceit, pure and simple.

Language is employed to hide and to disguise. Does the city not have flooding, or riots, or ghettos, or the poor because they're called something else. Can these problems for a bureaucracy be eradicated by assigning them new nomenclature identities?

Maybe some people really do think so. But most rational people don't - and certainly the people who are affected by or live under certain conditions aren't fooled. Only the report-writer him/herself seems to be misled.

Confusion, misunderstanding, and distrust among people and between people and institutions are caused by misuse of language. Pain, hurt, and despair are other by-products of this practice.

I wish that I could say there is an easy solution to this problem. There's not. I'm not even sure that many other people see language abuse as a problem.

Even worse, I don't believe that most people think about what they say at all.

Letters To The Editor

Take Kapper's Advice

Editor:
It's so enjoyable to read local columns such as the "Beach Crime Corner," "Second Opinion," "Beach Sports Beat," and "Sun Down" in The Virginia Beach Sun. They add a new freshness to the paper.

Another reason these columns are so good, is that all of them are about Virginia Beach, and Virginia Beach alone.

I made my husband cut out Danny Kappers' last "Beach Crime Corner" to use it as a checklist against home burglaries next month when we leave for vacation.

I believe that Danny Kappers really cares, and understands Virginia Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Weisburg,
Virginia Beach

Sam's Replacement?

Editor:
I'm very sorry to read that Sam Clay is leaving the city. Good luck Sam.

But who will take Sam's place as columnist? I have a suggestion. A Virginia Beach Jaycee named Danny Fowler said he'd like to try for the job. How about it? Would you give him a chance?

Danny Fowler,

You Dig Sands?

Editor:
Where did you dig up that Lynn Sands character? What is it? A boy or a girl? Why don't you say?

Boardwalk Thank You

Editor:

Thank you Virginia Beach Sun for explaining why I always had to get off the boardwalk, run on the sand or the road to get to the last strip of boardwalk at second street.

There may be some Virginia Beach residents opposed to commercial development, but I say you got to change to progress.

Gary Zagami,

Lee Cahill's City Council Report

How Is It Spent?

Community Development Money Discussed

A proposed restructuring of the Virginia Beach Citizens Advisory Committee which would remove members who do not live in target areas drew fire from what seem to be the targeted members.

After opposition from three long-time CAC members, Council decided Monday afternoon to defer action for 30 days and even to consider adding three to five at-large members.

The proposal under consideration Monday afternoon, which Mayor Dr. J. Henry Meccoy Jr. said came about through discussions in executive sessions, decreases the CAC Board from 16 to 12 members. Since those 12 are to be from 12 target neighborhoods, the non-resident members, like Mrs. Elizabeth S. McClain, a six-year member and secretary for five years; the Rev. Barnett Thoroughgood, president who lives in Thoroughgood; and Sam Houston, a seven-year member representing the Virginia Area-wide Model Program (SEVAMP) would not be eligible to serve.

The CAC advises Council on how Community Development money should be spent.

Other at-large members, that is, those not representing specific target areas, are Mary Davenport, of Newsom Farms which is a target area; Joshua Edwards, of Dandelion Crescent; Franklin Friend of thoroughgood; Mrs. Mary Smith, of Reedtown which is in the target area. Organizations represented are the NAACP, SEVAMP, the Community Services Board and the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. McClain told Council Monday that when a reporter asked her whether Council was trying to get rid of committee members she did not agree, but "now I find that's certainly a possibility."

She said when the committee, after two years of study on the need for a housing authority decided against one, the decision was considered a confrontation. She said the committee was just doing its job and is not a rubber stamp.

Why wasn't something done about Burton Station sooner? she asked. Without asking for five years, she said, nothing would have been done.

She pointed out that "pages of projects" in the 1980 water-sewer bond referendum have been completed, while Seateck, a target neighborhood with Community Development funds has tried to complete water and sewer projects for seven years.

McClain said why there were cost overruns in target area projects and found that overruns were the rule all over the city. However, the city staff said there were no remedies for the consistent cost overruns, Mrs. McClain said.

She charged that the CAC never received an answer to the consistently raised question of why two developers were able to hook on to Community Development Fund - paid utilities without reimbursing the Community Development Fund. The developers alluded to building homes next to Seateck on Owls Creek and next to Doyletown, both target neighborhoods. She said the Committee has been unable to find out whether the developers have paid the city any money at all for the utilities. Several years ago when the target neighborhood projects were being planned Council was concerned that any private developer or more affluent owners of target area property would benefit from Community Development funds.

She said the committee will continue to ask questions and the questions must be answered.

"Does Council really want to isolate our black communities again?" she asked. She said some will not speak up out of fear of losing funds if they disagree with the administration.

The Rev. Barnett Thoroughgood, CAC chairman, said the CAC is aware that the city is no longer required to even have a committee and the CAC is grateful that Council is considering retaining the CAC. He said, however, that he had problems with sections which limit the membership to target neighborhoods eliminating the contributions of citizens who see the problems from another viewpoint. He said he was a resident of Seateck from 1949 to 1976.

He said that the policy to select persons from the neighborhoods only deprives the citizens of electing their own representatives. Those who view the CAC as the arch enemies of the Administration must know that the CAC does not make policy, pay money or let contracts. It simply goes into the community and finds out the needs and makes recommendations, he said.

Houston said that maybe Council did not know how hard it was to bring the group together. He said that behind the scenes, the Housing Authority wants to be brought into the picture. Why was the change necessary? he asked.

McCoy said the intent was two-fold. Some think a smaller committee can do a better job, and objections that people on the committee represented organizations rather than the target area people.

Houston said the community should be represented but that Chapter X was brought in because of its experience. He said he wouldn't be on the committee if he didn't think he was of some assistance.

McCoy said Council did not want to be told that it had to have someone from these organizations.

Where did the document originate? asked Houston. "It must have originated from the city management... McClain and others from the non-target areas have made contributions."

McCoy said the document started with Council. "We talked about it in executive session."

Councilman Reid Ervin said the document does not change the control. The difference is to make sure the target neighborhoods are fully represented. He said Council in 99 percent of the cases, will appoint whoever the target neighborhoods want.

Houston said he has the impression the Advisory Committee is under pressure for a housing

"ECONOMIC INSTABILITY..."

IS THE REAL DANGER OF THE '80's!"

"We are faced with finding answers to short-term problems, without losing all hope of long-term solutions."

"This is why I feel that the Virginia Beach City Council must face economic realities, or we will bear the incalculable consequences."

"I am sure that individuals and businesses recognize economic pitfalls, but I'm not sure that the Virginia Beach City Council does."

"The willingness to pay for less essential aspects of city government seems waning."

"A city which spends millions of un-budgeted dollars generates deficits and increases public debts. When you add in a faltering economy, you are on the road to default on city loans (and economic chaos) which will paralyze essential services. All these factors affect the taxpayer much more than government."

"Each voter should demand that City Council face the inevitable consequences if deficit spending continues in Virginia Beach."

"Is a city where increased property appraisals become justification to increase taxes, the only sure thing is the rising cost of city government. I see this as a major issue in the May 4th election."

Cut Expenses, Buy Bulk Beef For Savings

Sun Flower

By Virginia Beach
Extension Agent
Doris Trant

Virginia Beach residents can cut their meat bill considerably by buying large cuts of meats. Buy large cuts instead of the small portions you are accustomed to purchasing. Markets usually sell whole cuts (subprimal) at a much lower price per pound than the small cuts. The consumer can cut smaller portions for family usage.

Subprimals: What Are They?

In your market you may have seen extra large cuts of beef, or, more rarely pork, sealed in special plastic packaging. These are "subprimal" cuts and they represent a major new method of meat merchandising. They also represent a good way to save money.

The beef carcass is traditionally divided into four or five major parts or "primal" cuts. When primal cuts are divided further, the resulting cuts are called "subprimals." The vacuum-packaged subprimals available in the markets are usually the best parts of these cuts with much of the bone and other waste already trimmed away by the packer.

Most beef moving in commerce now has been "broken" (cut into subprimals) at the packing plant, vacuum-packaged, then shipped to supermarkets or other grocery stores in boxes. It's known in the trade as "boxed beef." Usually these cuts are divided further by the retail store into smaller, "retail" cuts. However, there is a growing trend toward selling whole subprimals directly to consumers. Subprimal cuts represent an opportunity for substantial savings if you know how to handle them, and if you have adequate freezer space to store them. They range in size from 5 to 30 pounds.

How are Subprimals Different?

There are two major differences between vacuum-packaged meat and the meat you're used to:—Color. Subprimals appear purplish rather than bright red in the supermarket meat case. The bright red color most people associate with fresh meat actually comes from the meat's exposure to air. Since these cuts are vacuum-packed in the packing plant right after they're "broken," they are not exposed to air and therefore keep the darker color of freshly cut meat. The color will "bloom" into red shortly after the package is opened.—Odor. When first opened, vacuum-packaged meat has an odor not usually associated with fresh meat. It has been described as "sour" or "off." This odor should disappear within an hour after opening. If it doesn't, the meat may be spoiled.

Other facts about vacuum-packaged meat

Vacuum packaged meat usually has not been frozen and will keep at least a week in the refrigerator, and probably considerably longer. Of course it can be frozen as is, or cut up, wrapped, and then frozen. The three most commonly available sub-primals are the whole round tip, whole bottom round, and the whole top round. Less common are the strip loin, the ribeye roll, and the tenderloin. Occasionally you will find a top sirloin butt. Supermarkets often feature subprimals in their ads. (Whole bottom round is the most common in most parts of the country). Usually, the supermarket butcher will cut and wrap them for you at no extra charge. Even if there is a small charge (10 cents per pound is average) you are probably still saving money by buying the subprimal. Even if they are not displayed, markets often have subprimals available for sale on request.

VIRGINIA BEACH BUSINESS REVIEW

An Open Letter To The Citizens Of Virginia Beach:

"Are you going through an income tax audit? Does the tax examiner say you owe more tax? Well, before you sign an agreement form that says you owe money, maybe you'd better discuss it with a tax specialist. There may be a good chance that you do not owe all or part of the amount that the Internal Revenue Service says you owe."

"Too many taxpayers sign the agreement form that is given to them (or mailed to them) with the assumption that the tax examiner or revenue agent is the expert and that whatever he says must be right. That's a big mistake made by many taxpayers. You have nothing to lose by seeing a tax specialist (not just a tax return preparer) before signing that form."

"Perhaps you can benefit from my experience as a revenue agent from 1961 to 1968. Any service you receive will be from me personally, and not from an assistant."

"I worked for the Internal Revenue Service as an agent for approximately 7½ years. After resigning from the I.R.S. in 1968, I started my own tax practice (in New York). Thirteen years later, I decided to move where there is plenty of sunshine, and that's Virginia Beach. We moved here in September of 1981, and we're enjoying every day of it, especially without the snow!"

Virginia Beach Crime News

Can You Discuss Drinking Laws With Your Kids

Beach Crime
Corner

By Virginia Beach Police Sergeant Danny Kappers

Alcohol abuse is on the rise among teenagers in Virginia Beach.

Nationally alcohol abuse by teenagers has risen 300% in the last decade and is still climbing. Current estimates show that 85% of all teens drink occasionally or more than occasionally. The increase in juvenile alcohol abuse can be directly attributed to both the availability and the economy. Alcohol is cheaper and easier to get than other drugs and since most parents drink it is a socially acceptable act. It is some what hypocritical to come down hard on adolescents for doing what most adults do themselves.

Being a parent isn't easy especially with teenagers. Each day challenges them with more choices, decisions and pressures. Loving them just isn't enough. They need supervision. This is especially true when it comes to alcohol. Are you familiar enough with the law to educate your teen?

Virginia law states that persons under 18 may not purchase or possess beer, wine or distilled spirits. Beer may be purchased and consumed on ABC licensed premises by 18 year olds. A person must be 19 years of age to purchase beer for off premises consumption. Persons 21 or over may purchase wine or distilled spirits for consumption on or off premises. However, it is against the law for an adult to buy beer for off premises consumption for persons 18 or under or wine, and distilled spirits for persons under 21.

The primary responsibility for seeing that underage teens understand and abide by the law rests with the parent, serving beer, wine or distilled spirits to persons under 18, even in a private home, may lead to charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. If alcoholic beverages are available in your home, discuss with your teen the reason he or she is not being served.

Parental involvement should not stop there. When young people give a party at home, parents should get involved with the planning. If alcoholic beverages are to be served, be sure that adult supervision is present at all times, and know who is attending the party and their ages. Additionally, have non-alcoholic beverages available for those under age.

More than 4,000 teenage drivers were involved in alcohol related accidents in Virginia last year. Some of these might have been prevented by better supervision. If you have reason to believe that your child is using alcohol, get involved at once. You have the final responsibility for that child.

Q: Could my minor child be arrested for purchase or possession of alcoholic beverages?

A: Yes.

Q: If I allow teens to use my vacation home, boat or other facilities for parties where alcoholic beverages are served, am I legally responsible?

A: Yes, it could lead to the charge of maintaining a public nuisance.

Q: If an underage guest is involved in an accident after leaving my home intoxicated could I be held liable?

A: Possibly, the decision would vary with the circumstances.

Q: Could I be held liable for damage to property of others resulting from teenagers consuming alcoholic beverages in my home?

A: Yes.

Next week: Assaults on police officers

What About Cops, Beacon?

Editorial Comment

What's wrong with those Beacon boys?

Wake up over there.

I call attention to the March 4/5 issue of the Beacon. Page three. "Beach lawmakers offer kaleidoscope of bills, topics from anti-terrorism to teacher merit pay." Half a page.

Seven issues before the Virginia General Assembly are noted, with some elaboration.

But in this big pool of ink, the Beacon boys overlooked one proposal by Republican Senator A. Joe Canada. That is, Canada's Senate Bill 201 calling for mandatory jail time for those convicted of assaulting police officers.

What gives?

I'll bet you Beacon reporter Robin Scott knew of the proposal. The Sun splashed it some time ago. Some say that the proposal, designed to protect police officers from reverse police brutality, has been shot up the flagpole before and never flown. Maybe that's why the Beacon editors have ignored it. I mean, the issue may be tired but the proposal is real. They must be ignoring it. The Beacon editors must feel that there must be more community alarm over Virginia Beach children making bombs than the protection of our police officers. In the Summer the police are at the mercy of drunken, sweating, vein-popping, hot heads from out of town.

who, under present law, can assault police officers and face little or no sentence.

But why should the Beacon boys care what happens to Virginia Beach police officers? I mean, how sensitive can they be when they run a story on stray dogs, and the biggest picture on the spread is of a mutt urinating on a taxpayer purchased city truck? That's real tasteful.

But why worry about the safety of our police officers? Instead, spend two months investigating the oceanfront resort operations of Councilman Butch chin and his father.

Or, I wonder why the Beacon didn't write anything about the Possessing Act repeal? Just because Virginia Beach kids as young as the age of six, and sources say even younger, smoke pot and get it as easy as a sunburn in the summer, why should Beacon editors in this coastline city care how much of the illegal weed slips in here. They're sure their children won't see any. Oh no! Why should they care that a repeal of the Comitus Act opens the door for the military detection and monitoring of drug laden ships in route from South America to many times, Virginia Beach?

With all the reporters and cameras over at the Beacon, it seems they could pay a little more interest to community concerns and a little less over trying to influence city council.

Wait until next week when Sun Columnist Danny Kappers addresses the issue of reverse police brutality in next week's "Beach Crime Corner."

Budget Stuffing

Preparing the Virginia Beach 1982-83 Operating Budget is like stuffing a size eight foot into a size six shoe. Nobody wants to lop off part of the foot to fit. That would mean fewer services. Nobody wants a bigger shoe, because that would mean more taxes.

Interim City Manager Giles Dodd told City Council at an informal meeting Monday afternoon that the city's shoe size will be $16 1/2 million behind the projected expenditures, provided the same level of services are offered.

Vice Mayor Harold Heischberger said, "I'm glad I'm not running for election this time of the year," and that the object is "to increase revenues without costing the taxpayers anything."

In a more serious vein, he said there are no panaceas and that the alternatives are reducing services, not addressing needs of the services "we said we'd look at," and accepting the possibility that a tax increase to some extent is out of the horizon.

How the problem will be resolved depends on the budget hearings scheduled for April 6, 13 and 21 at 5 p.m.

Dodd said that his figures do not take into account the possible restoration of twice-a-week garbage collection which would add another $2 million to the budget or a reduction in the controversial meal tax which would reduce the city's revenues.

Dodd said he has no firm figures and although School Board estimates are included in his projections, he has received no firm figures from the School Board. He said, however, that the city's share in the School Board budget will increase 20 to 25 percent including the anticipated loss of impact funds. The local share for the current school budget was approximately $50 million.

The 10 to 11 percent increase in the city budget includes allowances for inflation and the 400 percent increase in Vepco rates.

A bill expected to be passed by the General Assembly will put additional money into education, but it also directs each school district to "endeavor to increase teachers salaries by 10 percent each year of the biennium." Assistant to the City Manager David Grochmal said the bill, which probably will be approved Saturday, increases basic aid from $1306 to $1,320 per pupil the first year and from $1,436 to $1,476 during the second year. The legislation also provides for special education, gifted programs and two other minor programs with no specific requirement that the money go to salaries.

Using information from department head requests, Dodd said the staff last week came up with a "sizeable revenue gap," first $20 million and after paring down, $16 1/2 million.

He said expenditure figures are not firm, the city has received nothing from the schools and still has no firm figures on the property assessment effects on the revenue. He said the staff trying to pare down some of the costs. He said he anticipates drastic lay-offs in personnel since the city cannot increase taxes to the extent needed to meet the projected expenditures.

He said a combination of trimming city services and some tax increase will be needed to balance the budget.

The current $237.6 million operating budget contains a real estate tax rate of 72 cents per $100 valuation, a five cent increase over the previous year. Dodd said that he wants to carry over a $5.9 million surplus to keep the city's high bond rating. If it looks like the city will collect more revenue than anticipated, he said, it could be spent, but he wants to keep the same surplus.

Councilman Reid Ervin suggested looking into Norfolk's plan to place a tax on garbage collections if twice-a-week collections are reinstated.

Councilman Dr. Clarence A. Holland suggested that the city give discounts to individuals who pay real estate taxes in advance. "How quickly are tax bills paid?" he asked. "Does everybody wait until the last day like me?" He said, for instan-authority. The CAC doesn't want a Housing Authority. It is concerned with getting water and sewer into neighborhoods and rehabilitating homes. "On occasion you have appointed members not supported by the CAC."

Ervin said he hadn't heard of a resurgence of the Housing Authority. "It's no more possible today than it was seven years ago," he said.

Houston said he had correspondence from the city manager to the contrary. "If you want me to continue I will be happy to continue," he said.

Councilman W. H. Kitchen III said he "got the feeling there is some move to herd members of the committee." He said there is "no move to create a Housing Authority or to get rid of particular individuals. It really bothers me there is so much distrust. We appreciate your service."

Vice Mayor Harold Heischberger asked the city manager and city attorney to research the legality of extending water and sewer installed with Community Development funds to other users.

Heischberger also said that he did not recall a discussion of the Housing Authority except when the Chamber of Commerce announced its study for a need for an Authority.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said Council "should not act until the committee has a chance to discuss changes. Maybe we did not convey enough." She said the change may be premature.

Councilman Meyera Oberdorf said that it is not the intent of Council to eliminate the input from the black community or to eliminate their participation in the democratic process.

Ervin's motion to defer the matter for 30 days was approved by a 10-0 vote. Councilman Patrick L. Standing was absent.

McCoey said a possible compromise would have on the committee three to five at-large members not from any particular organization.

Annual Horse Show Takes On New Look

By Leslie Allman

Special to The Sun

If you've attended the Virginia Beach Ocean Fun Horse Show for Cystic Fibrosis for any of the past three years, you know what a thrilling spectacle it is. Powerful, hot-headed jumpers mix with petite, gentle ponies to offer both an action-packed and a relaxing outing.

This year the event carries with it a new touch that promises to make it an even more enticing way to spend a spring afternoon. The show includes a country fair this year, a display and sale of local craftsmen and merchants. Tents and booths will house the exhibits where spectators can stroll leisurely and examine the offerings. Everything from homebaked goods to fancy needlework will be available. What a great way to get a head start on next year's Christmas shopping, not to mention all those upcoming weddings and graduational.

Besides the midway of local merchants, be sure to explore the portable tack shops. Though you may not be in the market for a new saddle or horseblanket, these out-of-town stores on wheels also stock a full supply of jewelry, boots, leather goods and novelty items.

The annual event brings to Tidewater each year a level of competition in the horse show world equal to that of major league baseball or World Cup Tennis. Residents should support and welcome the over one thousand participants and take advantage of the many unusual opportunities it provides. For more information about the show to be held at Camp Pendleton April 7-11, contact Carol Webb, 426-6596.

Beach Delegate

The McClanan Report

As the final week of the 1982 General Session approaches, several measures which I introduced have received final approval in the State Senate. Since these bills had already been passed by the House of Delegates, they will now become the law in Virginia effective July 1.

A bill which I introduced at the suggestion of one of our small contractors and the Commonwealth's Attorney's office closes a loophole in the state law designed to protect subcontractors. This statute requires contractors who receive funds for the purpose of paying their subcontractors to, in fact, use such funds to pay the subcontractors. As the law was written, a company which took bankruptcy was able to escape prosecution for the misappropriation of these funds because the statute did not specifically include the officers of the bankrupt corporation as being liable for their actions while an employee of the defunct corporation.

House Joint Resolution 93 directs the State Board of Education to study the feasibility of Merit Pay for our public school teachers. For a number of years, I have been very much interested in the Establishment of a mechanism whereby we may recognize excellence in teaching by awarding increased salaries to those teachers who have demonstrated outstanding ability in teaching our young people. We need to offer all the incentives possible to attract and retain these talented individuals in our public school system. Under this resolution, the Board of Education is requested to submit its plan for implementing a system of differentiated compensation, or merit pay, for outstanding performance in teaching to the General Assembly during the 1983 Session.

Another bill which I introduced and which has passed the Senate this week will make Virginia law clear as to the right of local governments to levy a tax on travel campground rentals. The law permits our localities to tax such items as meals and transient room rentals, and logically, overnight accommodations in a campground should be taxed on the same basis as overnight accommodations in a hotel or motel.

The 1982 Session will continue in Richmond through Saturday, March 13. Please do not hesitate to contact me at my office in Virginia Beach after the Session ends, whenever I may be of service to you.

Budget

ce, that people who pay six months in advance could get a five percent reduction and those who pay three months ahead, three percent off, etc.

Dodd said it would "help our cash flow but not do much for the budget." He said he has been looking at quarterly payments. The Beach now has semi-annual payments.

Department heads have requested 78 additional employees, most in the Fire and Police Departments, Dodd said.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf asked whether it would help the garbage program to provide an incentive for people with trash compactors.

Dodd said it would be a headache. He said, however, that the city is considering taking the dumpsters now at the rear of schools and placing them in front for the public to use, but this would not solve the problem for the North End of the Beach where there are no schools.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley suggested placing dumpsters at centralized locations.

Vice Mayor Harold Heischouer said the landfill is too far away for most people and the strategically located dumpsters may be the answer but may get messy.

Councilman Dr. E. T. Buchanan said that contracting out the garbage on operation to a private concern which could write off the equipment would eliminate the cost of new equipment purchases for the city. The city also would have to add more employees as well as equipment for the twice-a-week operation.

Councilman John A. Baum said the city would have no control of personnel if contractors were used.

Dodd said he also will recommend that the city ask for bids on hospitalization plans.

Council members also experienced some difficulty in accepting the need for eliminating some jobs. Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said that the city could consider not replacing those who leave.

Dodd said he is finding that a lot of people are not leaving jobs frequently.

Dodd said he understood that none of the Council members would want to increase taxes and that the city has been looking for "pockets of inefficiency." He added, "If we knew where they all were and eliminated them tomorrow, it would not be the kind of money needed (to balance the budget)."

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan introduced the idea of rewarding department heads who manage to reduce costs in their departments.

Ervin said, however, that to meet the budget by cutting people is unfair and dangerous. He said that's why a management study is needed to determine whether departments are overstaffed.

Buchanan pointed out that the reduction would be done in 60 or 70 days but gradually.

Oberndorf said incentives can root out inefficiency.

After presenting his alternatives, Heischouer said that he knew that the City Council had no authority to control the School Board line items, but that it was not fair to tie down the city employees without similar action on the School Board side.

Ervin suggested that the city inform the public through notices in the newspaper exactly what it costs in tax cents for twice-a-week garbage collections, what it will cost if the 10 percent meal tax is rolled back, applying the formula that one penny in real estate tax equals $680,000 in revenue.

Dodd said submitted to present the proposed budget to Council on March 31.

THE PASSING YEARS

*Life passes by so fast, Lord,
I know I'm sure to miss
A vital part unless you keep
Reminding me of this.
There's so much that I want to
do,
A lot I've left undone,
So many plans discarded,
And a few I've not begun.*

*Life passes by so fast, Lord,
How often I've been told,
It always does around the time
That we are growing old.
"For everything a season"
is wise as well as just,
But I had rather wear me out,
Than fall apart with rust.*

*Life passes by so fast, Lord,
The days, the months, the years,
Lord keep a smile upon my lips,
And blot away the tears.
Teach me to lean upon Your
arm,
When pain and sickness strike,
To tell the facts from fancies,
that sometimes look alike.*

*Life passes by so fast, Lord,
And yet how kind You are,
In granting me the precious
years,
That I have had so far.
So let the days grow shorter,
The darkest shadows part,
But put the wrinkles on my face,

Cops May Get Rougher Protective Laws For Cops Die

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

"Most of the police officers in Virginia Beach have college degrees," said Virginia Beach Police Sergeant Danny Kappers. "If they can't go to work without being assaulted, they'll find other work. They don't need this grief."

The story is unyielding. Virginia Beach police officers continue to be assaulted. The assailants are rarely jailed, usually fined. More assaults. Virginia Beach General Assembly delegates have proposed legislation requiring incarceration for cop beaters. Reverse police brutality bills never pass. What's the answer?

"My gut reaction is that it means more assaults on police officers," Kappers, who is also in charge of the VBPD crime prevention unit, said.

"The officers may have to become more physical themselves. Look at our position. We're civilized but we can't be forced, or pushed. People are very defensive towards police officers."

Or else, the cops will quit the force. Even if a few officers are guilty of provoking some skirmishes, statistics indicate that more officers, proportional to population, are assaulted than in any other occupational field.

Legislative bills, designed to deter assaults on police officers have been introduced to the Virginia General Assembly, yearly it seems.

This year two bills, introduced by Virginia Beach Senator A. Joseph Canada and Henrico County Delegate William F. Parkerson, were killed. The bills called for mandatory five year jail chief organizations.

Canada's proposed Senate Bill 206, according to Marshall Cook, assistant

Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles R. Wall, said he's not surprised, but disappointed the bills didn't pass. Wall favors mandatory sentencing for cop beaters.

But even though Virginia Beach police officers must endure at least another year without legislative protection, the law enforcement work continues.

"We'll keep doing our jobs," Wall said. "The courts and legislators are supposed to mirror the public sentiment."

Wall said a new organization of local police chiefs is forming, and should exert more pressure on lawmakers and judges to deal more harshly with the issue.

Kappers said most Virginia Beach police officers were not expecting the bills to pass.

"The proposed bills must be more palatable to liberal legislators, Kappers said. He also said pressure will fall on local judges to impose sentences harsh enough to hinder future attacks.

Parkerson's, Senate Bill 332, was passed by March 10.

Beach Children Learn About The NAACP

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

Seatack Elementary School was warm and peaceful recently. The aroma of fresh baked rolls still lingered in the locked-lined halls although lunch, and a student assembly had already transpired that day.

For most students, the lunch that day was probably not much different from those in the past. But the topic of that day's assembly, black history, was a step above.

In a culmination of a week of activities celebrating Black History Month, Reverend Chuck Patterson, a four year Virginia Beach resident, addressed approximately 350 third through sixth graders at Seatack.

Patterson is a volunteer chaplain with the Veterans Administration Center, Hampton, and employed full-time as Area II Chairman of the Virginia State chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Patterson said his invitation to speak at Seatack was extended by former principal Emma W. Hairston. Seatack Elementary, grades K through six, serves students from the following section of Virginia Beach: Seatack, Oceana Gardens, London Bridge, Gatewood Park, Shetham Standing with Reverend Patterson are several Seatack students. From left to right, these are their comments: Shelia Kovette Wilson, 12, sixth grade, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson: "Black History Month is a great opportunity for you to feel like you were one of those living in those times. Michael Reid, 13, fifth grade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Leon Reid: "He talked about famous people back in 1866. I liked the program because the staff he talked about was real important to black and white folks." Eric Phillips, 12, fifth grade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Phillips: "He talked about famous Black people, how we ought to study more about them. I think it's a good idea. Even in Social Studies we need to study more about how black people came to America." Sean Patterson, 12, fifth grade, Mr. and Mrs. John Patterson: "I didn't see it all, but, he said they used to have Black schools just for blacks. That's not right. Everybody should be treated the same."

Estates, Nottingham Estates, Pinewood Gardens and Lynnhaven.

Patterson said he did not address the 350 assembled students, third through sixth graders, on present day civil rights movements or any current persisting racial questions.

"Basically I gave a historical overview of the NAACP," Patterson said. "Because it is Black History Month, it was proper to include such a program in the school's week of activities."

Patterson said he was pleasantly surprised from the students' reactions to his lecture.

"The kids were very responsive, and had a good understanding of what I discussed," he said. After the lecture Patterson could be heard in the halls asking the young students, "What is segregation?" "What is integration? Racism?"

"The students appreciate what the NAACP is doing," Patterson continued, "and they want to make sure everybody gets a fair shake. This type of lecture allows the students to learn more about themselves and about race relations in general."

Charles H. Grindle, Seatack assistant principal, and a nine year Virginia Beach resident described some of the students activities hosted at Seatack during the last week of Black History Month.

"We had big picture displays, poems, visual arts displays, and slide presentations," Grindle said. "We also featured in each classroom various projects with students role playing the parts of famous black Americans. There were also written and oral reports."

Grindle and Patterson was asked to address the students because, "we were celebrating Black History Week here at Seatack and we thought it would be nice to have someone from the NAACP speaking to the students."

Grindle said the message Patterson brought to the students was "to work together as one for equality. He also gave a short history of the development of the NAACP. In general he tried to make the kids more aware of great Black Americans."

Also during the assembly, Virginia Beach resident Barbara Morris sang two operatic songs, and Seatack's Mrs. Susan Hogue's sixth graders portrayed various Black Americans in a play.

Seatack Elementary School is celebrating its 30th birthday on Thursday, March 3. A formal celebration will take place at a later date.

Italian Company Opens Distribution Center In Virginia Beach

Fontana Luigi Spa, an Italian-based company known worldwide for the manufacture of high strength carbon steel and stainless steel fasteners, recently opened its first United States distribution center in Virginia Beach.

Fontana Distribution, Inc., an 18,000 square foot facility on 513 Viking Drive, at present carries approximately $1 million in inventory. The fasteners will be marketed to distributors nationwide by Fontana manufacturing representatives.

Grant Baird, formerly general manager of the Bulten International and Ramnas Product divisions of Kenthal Corp., has been appointed vice president and treasurer of the new facility.

According to Baird, Fontana Distribution, Inc., unlike other importers, will sell only those products manufactured by the Italian-based parent company. "And for this reason," says Baird, "the customer who buys a Fontana product is assured of receiving a fastener that has undergone stringent quality control tests and is tradeable through its distinctive head markings."

Fontana Luigi has made plans to open additional distribution centers in the Southwest and West. The Italian company has an international fastener sales in the $220 - $240 million range, and has been in the United States for four years.

Beach Students Win Magazine Prizes

"Five teens from Virginia Beach have won the grand prize in Co-Ed's Plan-A-Party contest, with their entry 'A Journey To The Stars,'" announced W. Page Thompson, publisher of Co-Ed and Forecast Magazines.

Co-Ed will reward their creative efforts with a live performance by a major musical group. In addition, a recreation of the winning party in the June issue of Co-Ed is part of the prize, plus record albums or tapes for every student in the winners' home economics class. The winning teacher, Mary Louise Nutter, will receive "The Complete Kitchen," a set of three versatile appliances from Hamilton Beach, for classroom use.

"The contest was a fantastic learning experience," Ms. Nutter declared, "It fit in perfectly with the way we teach menu-planning and nutrition, and the party idea added an extra dimension."

"We have an outstanding group of students here, who really worked hard on this project," Ms. Nutter added. "I simply took them the contest requirements, and they took it from there. The results were terrific!" The five winning students are Shannon Boyce, Almee Brantley, Brigid Brinkman, Michelle Davis, and Gretchen Merritt. They are all enrolled in the Home Economics class at Lynnhaven Junior High.

The Plan-A-Party contest was a food promotion that appeared in the October issue of Co-Ed, the largest monthly magazine reaching teenage consumers in America's schools. The contest was sponsored by major food companies, whose products were to be used in the entries. The sponsors were: Hi-C Fruit Drinks, from Coca-Cola Foods, Minute Rice and Shake 'n Bake from General Foods, Pork from the National Pork Producer's Council, Kitchen Bouquet from The Clorox Company, Del Monte Lite Fruits, Fleischmann's Yeast, and Kraft Caramels, Grated Parmesan Cheese, Italian Dressing, and Pure Prepared Mustard.

G.I.M.

New Alternative For Emotionals

By Lynn Sparrow,

Special to the Sun

Virginia Beach residents who are seeking help for personal problems, or even those who are just interested in understanding themselves better, have a new alternative to consider: Guided Imagery and Music (G.I.M.). A relatively new form of therapy, this innovative approach departs somewhat from the "talking cure" of psychotherapy. Instead it explores the colorful and emotion-laden world of inner imagery.

Virginia Beach's new GIM practitioner is Carol Bush, a licensed Clinical social worker who previously practiced GIM in Miami and is one of only 24 certified practitioners of GIM in all of the United States.

Bush acquired her specialty training from Dr. Helen Bonny, the founder and developer of this new therapy. As a member of a team of researchers studying altered states of consciousness at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, Dr. Bonny had the privilege of investigating a number of possible alternatives to traditional psychotherapy, including the clinical use of hallucinogenic drugs. Despite the wide variety of alternatives considered, Dr. Bonny found that nothing worked better than music combined with deep relaxation and the exploration of spontaneous inner imagery. She defines her technique as "a gentle and flowing way of attaining deep states of consciousness."

As a veteran of over 20 years of experience as a clinical social worker in hospitals, mental health centers and private practice, Bush is enthusiastic about the potential applications of GIM. While some people may have difficulty achieving verbal or logical insights into complex emotional problems, these same individuals often make rapid headway when they are encouraged to view the problem from the much different perspective of symbols and visual imagery. Current brain research indicates that thinking in images may be a superior way to grasp the overall nature of a complex problem. Just as a painting may express a number of differing ideas all at once, thinking in images can help people get the "whole picture" of their longstanding problems. Because of the advantages of thinking in images, Bush claims that GIM can actually speed up the therapeutic process.

Who can benefit from this approach? Anyone who can think in images, says Bush. Some people who have cultivated the ability come into therapy prepared to experience deep states of imagery. Others who have lost this natural ability can, nevertheless, be taught to experience inner imagery once again. People with all kinds of stress-related and adjustment problems can benefit from GIM. Bush does not recommend it, however, for individuals with a weak grasp on reality, such as schizophrenics.

To illustrate her work with GIM, Bush tells of a young woman who came into therapy suffering from anorexia nervosa, a serious problem characterized by a lack of appetite and an inability to keep food down. Untreated, anorexia can lead to death by starvation.

Although the woman had developed a great deal of insight into her illness after engaging in regular counseling for over two years, she still exhibited serious symptoms. In her first GIM session, she experienced bodily sensations suggesting the rigid control she had maintained over her body. This control became focused in her stomach area, which felt "hot and heavy, like it weighs 10 tons!" A bright red color seemed to radiate from the stomach. It frightened her to approach the red area in her imagery. "As long as nothing moves in there or stays there, I'm safe," she reasoned.

As the work continued on the "red stomach," she slowly began to allow pent-up emotions to surface. Through the imagery, she faced her anger, feelings of betrayal, and forbidden sexual impulses. Eventually, she was able to "re-own" her red stomach, seeing it as a source of basic life energy rather than an enemy to be fearfully denied.

1982 Mid-Atlantic Wheelchair Games

In the Spring of 1982, Wheelchair Athletes from the Mid-Atlantic region will converge on Virginia Beach to compete in the 10th Annual Mid-Atlantic Wheelchair Games.

The games will begin at 11 a.m. on Friday, April 30 and conclude at 4 p.m. on Sunday, May 2, 1982. The City of Virginia Beach, Department of Parks and Recreation and the Mid-Atlantic Wheelchair Athletic Association, will co-host the games. The majority of events will be held at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center/Kempville.

Since the inception of the games, Virginia Beach will be the first municipality ever to host the Mid-Atlantic Wheelchair Games. The Department of Parks and Recreation is gathering help from municipal, private, and volunteer sources to make this the best Mid-Atlantic Games to date.

The City of Virginia Beach and the Department of Parks and Recreation are promoting these games to reflect the importance of sports and the part they play in the lives of the physically disabled.

In addition to the traditional areas of competition (track and field, weightlifting, swimming and archery) special exhibition events are planned for tennis, bowling, wheelchair high jump, 5K race, and chess tournaments. The track and pentathlon events will be held at First Colonial High School. The 5K race "Glide & Stride" is for wheelchair and able-bodied athletes.

Constable May Lose $76,000

By Lee Cahill,
Sun Reporter

The Virginia Beach High Constable's Office stands to lose $76,000 next year under legislation enacted the 1982 General Assembly.

House Bill 561, the legislation stipulates that fees charged by the High Constable should not exceed those charged by the Sheriff's office.

The High Constable's office tries to be self-sustaining and its fees for serving papers are higher than those charged by the Sheriff's Department which receives support from the State.

Virginia Beach City Council, in recognition of the potential loss, endorsed a resolution requesting Governor Charles S. Robb to give careful consideration to the legislation and to defer authorizing the House Bill.

The resolution notes that the Virginia Beach has been a victim to municipal cuts in State funds.

Under the present fee system the legislation would mean a $62,000 loss for the high constable's office. However, high constable T. V. Ward said the office had intended to increase its fees which would bring the loss to $76,000. Last year, he said, the office collected $140,000 in fees. He said fees charged make it possible for the office to serve civil process papers without costing the city.

The office had anticipated an increase from $3.50 to $4 for serving court process papers, compared to $2 charged by the sheriff's department and similar increases in other services. At present, for instance, for serving papers involving goods chattel, the office charges $10 compared with the sheriff's $3. For eviction notices, $6 compared to the sheriff's $2.

Oceana Gets New Barracks

Construction of a modern, motel-style barracks for enlisted Navy personnel assigned to NAS Oceana began recently when Congressman G. William Whitehurst (R-Va.) and Captain R. W. Jewell, Commanding Officer, turn the first shovelful of dirt in groundbreaking ceremonies.

The $5.6-million enlisted barracks will house 756 sailors in rooms designed for three occupants. Each 270 sq. foot room will also include an adjoining bath. "This will be the newest modern unit currently being added to the station's barracks complex. The one nearing completion will help to alleviate berthing problems by providing quarters for 504 single enlisted personnel presently assigned to squadrons and other tenant activities aboard NAS Oceana.

The new building, which will provide a "home-away-from-home" atmosphere for many enlisted returning from arduous deployment at sea and those working aboard the station, will also have a lounge area for relaxation.

Construction by Kenbridge Construction Company of Kenbridge, Virginia is targeted for completion in the Fall of 1983.

Congressman G. William Whitehurst (R-Va.) (c) and Rear Admiral John H. Fetterman (r), Commander Tactical Wings Atlantic, break ground for the construction of a $5.6 million enlisted barracks at NAS Oceana. During the recent ceremony, Captain R. W. Jewell (l), NAS Oceana Commanding Officer, said the new 756-person unit will relieve the "painful shortage of adequate housing" and provide improved quality of life for residents. Congressman Whitehurst said, "The lifestyle of those who make the military a career is among my concerns."

Percy R. Patterson, a civilian member of the SURFLANT Supply and Financial Department, was presented with the "Distinguished Scout Master Award" in recognition of his outstanding leadership as an area Scout Master for the past nine years.

This award, given by the local Eagle Scout Chapter on behalf of the National Eagle Scout Association, was presented to Patterson by Vice Admiral James R. Sanderson, deputy CINCLANTFLT, an Eagle Scout himself since his youth.

Patterson was one of only 26 Scout Masters selected to receive this award nationally during the past year.

Master Chief Sonar Technician (STCM) Stewart T. Forrester, SURFLANT Readiness and Training Department, was presented with the local scouting council's highest decoration, the "Silver Beaver Award," for his distinguished service in youth activities.

Presented by Roy McGrady, local Silver Beaver Award Chairman, STCM Forrester's award recognized his total involvement in local scouting, church, school and community youth activities. Master Chief Forrester was one of only eight local individuals to earn this award during the past year.

VIRGINIA BEACH BUSINESS REVIEW

Posey Peddler Is Full Service Beach Florist

Susan Hunter had sixteen years of solid experience in the florist business when she opened a shop in Virginia Beach last year.

Mrs. Hunter has been in the florist business since 1965. At first she worked for other florists, learning the business, and then she owned and operated a florist shop in West Virginia for four years. She also gained experience in the florist business in Washington, D.C.

In 1975, she was working for the Holiday Inn chain when she was transferred to Tidewater.

On Sept. 1, 1981, she opened The Posey Peddler Florist in the Bayside Shopping Center on Pleasure House Road near Shore Drive. Susan is the sole owner, and she has a full-time manager (Pat Schnackel), plus one part-time employee. The shop is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

The Posey Peddler is truly a full-service florist. They specialize in wedding work, funeral work and special events (like funerals and Greek dinners). Susan and her staff handled flower arrangements for the WGH Wedding Festival at the Omni on February 3.

Susan is a qualified teacher of floriculture (flower arranging) and is available for lecture work with garden clubs and women's clubs. She also works with interior decorators on special projects.

She wants to remind readers of the Virginia Beach Sun that The Posey Peddler delivers throughout Tidewater, not just in the Bayside area, and that they are set up to take telephone orders through Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

Susan lives in Virginia Beach with her husband, Bob, who manages the Bayside Shell service station.

The volume honors the nation's outstanding college students. Criteria used to select members are scholarship, leadership, extra-curricular activities, citizenship, service to a college or university, and future promise.

Grace Ann, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Robert D. Rodgers of 2432 Hood Drive, is working toward the bachelor of science degree in physical education. Her activities at Longwood have included: Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority, Geist, and president of the Longwood College Company of Dancers.

Longwood, a coeducational state college of some 2,500 students, offers majors in 26 subject areas in the liberal arts and sciences, therapeutic recreation, business, social work, and teaching.

"ECONOMIC INSTABILITY ...

IS THE REAL DANGER OF THE '80's!"

"We are faced with leading answers to short-term problems, without losing all hope of long-term solutions."

"This is why I feel that the Virginia Beach City Council must face economic realities, or we will bear the unacceptable consequences."

"I am sure that individuals and businesses recognize economic pitfalls, but I'm not sure that the Virginia Beach City Council does."

"The willingness to pay for less essential aspects of city government seems waning."

"A city which spends millions of un-budgeted dollars generates deficits and increases public debt. When you add in a faltering economy, you are on the road to defaults on city loans (and economic chaos) which will paralyze essential services. All these factors affect the taxpayer much more than government."

"Each voter should demand that City Council face the inevitable consequences if deficit spending continues in Virginia Beach."

"In a city where increased property appraisals become justification to increase taxes, the only sure thing is the rising cost of city government. I see this as a major issue in the May 6th election."

-Arthur G. Riddell

Sun Plans Beach Progress Edition

The Virginia Beach Story

Past, Present, and Future

The broad and exciting spectrum of life in Virginia Beach will be covered in detail in an upcoming special edition of The Virginia Beach Sun.

It will be called "The Virginia Beach Story," and will appear as a tabloid supplement to the Sun in late July.

"This special will promote the city's growth and serve as a promotional tool for business, industry and tourism," noted Hanes Byerly, Publisher of The Virginia Beach Sun.

"Our news department is already hard at work preparing copy to make sure that the pictures and articles reflect the progressive motion of all phases of government and commerce in this, the nation's eleventh fastest growing city.

"This special edition will be distributed to our many readers, visitors to our community, and to companies and individuals interested in locating here.

"Additional copies will be sent to the area's business and industrial leaders, to libraries, State legislators, members of Congress, and other influential people in the entire Tidewater area," Byerly noted.

"We sincerely hope that as many businessmen as possible will give serious consideration to the value of having their firms represented in 'The Virginia Beach Story,' both from the standpoint of a public relations story and as an advertiser.

"Many thousands will read with avid interest the entire contents of 'The Virginia Beach Story,'" Byerly said.

Tourism, agriculture, manufacturing, real estate, retailers, wholesalers, and other aspects of business and commerce will be explored through stories and photographs.

City services such as fire protection, police, schools, parks and recreation, libraries, and industrial development will also play a major role in "The Virginia Beach Story."

News and sales teams will be gathering information for this special tabloid from now until June. "The Virginia Beach Story" will appear in July.

History Students Honored

The three Virginia Beach chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution have given their annual recognition award to outstanding U.S. History students at each of Virginia Beach's seven high schools. The DAR awards went to (front, from left) Sarah Phillips, Cox High; Karen Kolb, First Colonial High; Kris Faust, Princess Anne High; Carolotta Eike, Bayside High; and (back, from left) Erik Walter, Green Run High; Keith Lowe, Kempsville High; and Roland Miss, Kellam High.

The DAR also recognized three teachers for their outstanding contributions in teaching U.S. History. They were Laura Ezell, First Colonial High, selected by the Princess Anne chapter of DAR; William Eley, Green Run High, selected by the Lynnhaven Parish chapter; and Anne Quarterman, Bayside High, selected by the Adam Thoroughgood chapter.

Museum Of Marine Sciences Received $60,000

The Junior League of Norfolk-Virginia Beach, Inc. has appropriated $18,000 to the proposed Museum of Marine Sciences, increasing the amount of pledges to the museum by community organizations to almost $60,000.

The Junior League will give the money to the museum over a three-year period to be used toward the establishment of a "touch tank" of live specimens which museum visitors can feel and hold. The "touch tank" will be a part of the Chesapeake Bay Exhibit Hall, one of the largest exhibit areas planned for the museum.

Private funds for the construction of exhibits has been confined thus far to a drive conducted among its members by the Council of Community Organizations for the Museum of Marine Sciences (C-COMMS). C-COMMS is made up of representatives from more than 50 civic organizations in Tidewater.

Back Bay Wildfowl Guild led off the list of contributors in January, 1980, with a pledge of $10,000. Other organizations which have pledged since then include:

Virginia Beach Council of Women's Clubs, $10,000.

Virginia Beach Junior Garden Club, $5,000.

Bay Colony Garden Club, $1,000.

Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs, $1,000.

Bayside Lions Club, $1,000.

Virginia Beach Sea Urchins Dive Club, $300.

Chesapeake Bay Sierra Club, $100.

Virginia Wildlife Federation, $100.

National Audubon Society, Virginia Beach Chapter, $100.

Stuart Stuart Cake, Chairman of C-COMMS, predicts pledges from community organizations will eventually exceed $100,000.

"The museum will be one of the most heavily-supported capital projects in Tidewater in terms of combined giving by community organizations," he said.

Later this spring, the second phase of the museum fund drive will begin with a campaign among private individuals and corporations in the Tidewater area.

If the museum is able to meet its funding goals and construction schedule, it will open in the fall of 1983 on Owls Creek of General Booth Blvd.

Virginia Beach Gardening

Intensive Gardening Popular

Sun Flower

By Virginia Beach
Extension Agent
Randy Jackson

Intensive gardening keeps down weeds, and makes gardens more accessible

Intensive gardening methods are catching on in Virginia Beach.

Talk to most any gardener who is using raised beds for vegetables and flowers and you'll get an enthusiastic recommendation. Raised beds are an effective way to cope with poorly drained clay soils in our area.

Here are some of the advantages of raised beds:

- The soil drains faster and warms up quicker in the spring.
- Weeding and watering time is reduced.
- Water soaks into the soil rather than running off.
- Earthworms thrive in the moist environment.
- Yields of vegetables are increased because the soil is deeper.
- Garden has a neat appearance.
- Soil compaction is eliminated because you rarely step into the beds.

If your budget is tight, you can get by without wooden frames, as the Chinese have for centuries. Mix compost with soil to build up beds 6 inches higher than the surrounding soil level. Beds without frames tend to erode when rainfall is heavy so it is advisable to use some type of organic mulch.

Raised bed frames need not be expensive. Frames can be built of used or rough lumber, painted or dipped in cooper naphenate, a wood preservative that is not toxic to plants. Do not use creosote or copper sulphate; they are toxic to plants. Frames should be at least 6 inches deep and not more than 4 to 5 feet wide so that vegetables can be harvested without stepping into the bed and compacting the soil.

With our heavy clay soils it is never advisable to walk in the garden when the soil is wet, clay compacts very easily. With raised beds, you can scatter organic mulch on the walkways. This helps keep weeds down and makes the garden accessible at all times. You will find yourself starting your garden earlier and working it later in the year.

Virginia Beach General

Hospital Asking For City Funds

Virginia Beach General Hospital, facing close to $400,000 in added costs during 1982, has asked the city for help.

The costs will be generated by indigent obstetrical patients who formerly were delivered at Norfolk General Hospital.

George G. Phillips Jr., chairman of the Virginia Beach General Hospital Board of Directors, in a letter to Council, requests the City Council allocate money to help pay for the added costs.

Norfolk General said last fall it would no longer accept indigent obstetrical patients from Virginia Beach after March 1. He said that indigent individuals have received substantial amounts of their health care at the clinics operated by Norfolk General. The clinics, as part of the teaching institutions, have found the indigent patient to be very valuable as part of their training programs. Phillips writes there has been a long-standing arrangement between the clinics sponsored by the Virginia Beach Health Department and Norfolk General Hospital to refer indigent patients to the various clinics sponsored by the hospital.

Phillips said that as a result of the Norfolk General's action, Virginia Beach General anticipates in 1982 there will be approximately 3400 or more indigent obstetrical patients, and about 300 of these non-paying patients will be delivered at the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Based on current charges, Phillips said, the average cost to the hospital for an obstetrical stay is $1,309, which means that paying patients of the hospital will have to absorb $392,700 in added costs. He added the obstetricians practicing in Virginia Beach normally charge $400-$550 for a delivery and the anesthesiologist's charge is $120 and the pediatrician's charge is $75.

A request to include indigent obstetrical support in the 1982-83 budget was denied by former City Manager George L. Hanbury.

Phillips said the caring for the indigents should be a responsibility of the hospital, the physicians and the city and an appropriate sharing of the financial responsibility should be absorbed by all citizens of Virginia Beach.

He said there is a precedent for the financial support by the city in that it has operated prenatal and postpartum clinics which provide care for the indigent patient prior to and after birth.

Interim City Manager Giles Dodd said he was looking into the possibility of a plan whereby the State would pay 75 percent of the cost and the city 25 percent.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan directed that Dodd, in his response to the hospital, "should make it clear we're not taking care of all of this."

Assaults Impair Cops' Decision-Making

Beach Crime Corner

By Virginia Beach Police Sergeant Danny Kappers

Step right up. For a limited fine and a suspended jail sentence you can vent your life's frustrations on a Virginia Beach police officer.

That's right folks for less than $100 you can assault a cop in this city with little fear of going to jail. Take your best shot because if the officer strikes back, you may have a good law suit.

During the calendar year 1981, there were 157 assaults on police officers, one of which resulted in the death of officer Daniel Maloney. When the department is at full strength we have 397 sworn officers, of this number there are approximately 226 patrol officers. Given this figure, over half of your patrol force was assaulted last year. I think retired Police Chief W. W. Davis said it best, "When a Virginia Beach police officer is assaulted, every citizen in the city is assaulted." If the recognized law enforcement body of this city is not safe from assault, you the law abiding citizens are in big trouble.

Our legislators are sleeping on the job, with one notable exception. State senator A. Joe Canada proposed Senate Bill 201, calling for mandatory jail time for those convicted of assaulting police officers. I along with most officers applaud Senator Canada's efforts. Unfortunately, legislation of this nature has been proposed in the past and has died in committee. Police officers today are beginning to feel that in the criminal justice system they are a necessary evil and if the courts and attorneys could figure out a way to do without us they would. Being assaulted is unpleasant. But to take your assailant to court and, because he hasn't hired a lawyer (lawyer's cases are heard first) you have to sit through four or five tedious hours until your case is heard, can be equally unpleasant.

Even in his declining years Mohammad Ali commanded several million dollars or more to be beaten and abused. The average salary of a Virginia Beach patrol officer, including benefits, is $8.33 an hour. I understood when I raised my right hand that I was in jeopardy of being beaten and abused by those persons who could not comprehend the concepts of law and society. However, I expected (much to my disappointment) to be supported by the judicial system and the legislative body.

Many of you may be asking yourselves why the penalty for assaulting a police officer need be more severe than for assaulting you.

The answer is, for every citizen in Virginia Beach that is assaulted, 20 police officers will be assaulted. Such a ratio puts the average cop on the defensive and may impair his decision making capability. So what's the bottom line? Well a shot to the jaw wouldn't hurt nearly as bad if we could get a shot in the arm from our judges and legislators.

Funds Cut

Cloud Hangs Over Science Museum

Virginia Beach was denied State funding for its Museum of Marine Sciences for political rather than financial reasons, Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. has charged.

At a special press conference Monday morning, Mayor McCoy released a statement expressing his "dismay and disappointment over the fact that the Virginia General Assembly cut the funding for this project." He said, "in view of the similar facilities which were funded in Roanoke, Norfolk, Richmond and Newport News, it is patently clear that the cut was based purely on political, not financial, reasons."

Virginia Beach had requested $1.5 million, but as things now stand it can expect $150,000 from the General Assembly.

Mayor McCoy later at an informal session of Council appointed a committee composed of Councilmen Clarence A. Holland and E. T. Buchanan to study the city's options.

Mac Rawls, executive director of the project, said the city has one last chance in the Assembly; it can ask Governor Charles S. Robb to have the matter reinstated at a short session of the Assembly scheduled in April.

Virginia Beach Del. Owen Pickett, Rawls said, suggested this can be done. Pickett is a member of the House Appropriations Committee which considered the allocation. The bill went into this committee for $150,000 and came out amended with a $1.5 million award.

However, the bill came out of the Finance Committee with the $150,000 figure. Pickett is the city's only representative on the Appropriations Committee. The Beach has no strictly Beach representatives on the Finance Committee. Peter Babalas and Stanley Walker, who are on the committee, represent parts of Virginia Beach along with their major constituency, Norfolk.

Barring the intercession of Governor Chuck Robb, other options remaining to keep the Museum project viable, Rawls said, are to find other means of financing, such as revenue bonds, or cutting back on the size of the Museum.

The total cost of the museum has been estimated at $6 million. Of this, the City of Virginia Beach contributed $3.5 million, contingent upon the General Assembly's appropriating $1.5 million. Another one million dollars is expected to come from private sources. Rawls said that although the Museum Board of Trustees has not started its major fund-raising campaign, over $60,000 has been committed by civic organizations. The Board, headed by former City Councilman John Griffin, is a non-profit corporation.

Allocations for other projects are:

The Chrysler Museum in Norfolk, $800,000; the Jacques Cousteau Society, in Norfolk, $800,000; the Science Museum of Roanoke Valley, $2.6 million; the Newport News-Hampton National Science Center, $25,000, and Richmond's State Science Museum, $1 million.

Except for the Richmond Museum, the funded organizations are predominately private groups receiving public money and address no specified need of the State of Virginia.

"The Museum of Marine Sciences," he said, "was to be devoted to Virginia's most important natural resource—its marine environment. Unlike its coastal neighboring states of North Carolina and Maryland, Virginia has no substantial facilities which exist for the purpose of increasing public knowledge and awareness of this resource. Kepone, shoreline erosion and the overall decline of the quality of this environment make a strong case for the need for such a facility in this state. The proposed museum in Virginia Beach was designed to address precisely that need."

McCoy added, "The Museum has actual commitments to it which would have provided four dollars for every dollar in state funds it received."

"This is not an expression of sour grapes on my part, but that I feel is rightful indignation over the fact that although Virginia Beach is one of the greatest sources of tax revenues for the Commonwealth," we are proportionately the least of its recipients in terms of state funding. Our chances of making this become a reality for this city and state have been greatly reduced by the actions of the General Assembly."

Virginia Beach heard the bad news when legislators came out of conference Sunday at 5 a.m.

Letters To The Editor

Writer Assails Federal Reserve Board

Editor:

After Congress had passed the Federal Reserve Bill, Congressman Charles Lindbergh, Sr., told Congress... "This act establishes the most gigantic trust on earth...When the President signs the Act the invisible government by the money power, proven to exist by the Money Trust investigation, will be legalized."

"The new law will create inflation whenever the trusts want inflation..."

"From now on depressions will be scientifically created."

The Federal Reserve is not Federal. It is a group of private banks. Despite the Federal in its name, the government does not own it, does not run it...nor does it control it.

It is not responsible to the will of Congress, or to the American people. Any law passed by Congress affecting the economy can be instantly nullified by the Federal Reserve.

Congressman Wright Patman has pointed out that the "President cannot submit a program that is likely to be effective...unless the Federal Reserve is willing to cooperate."

Weber's New World Dictionary defines inflation as "an increase in the amount of currency in circulation, resulting in a relatively sharp and sudden fall in its value and rise in prices..."

You may ask "What has all this to do with me?" The answer is: everything! Take a bill out of your wallet and not the inscription on it...it is inscribed with the words "Federal Reserve Note."

As stated before, please don't let the word "Federal" fool you. That bill you hold is not even issued by the Federal Government!

Federal Reserve Notes are only good as long as someone will accept them in payment. They have no intrinsic value. There is absolutely nothing backing these notes...it is only paper issued by the Federal Reserve.

Not only are Federal Reserve Notes intrinsically worthless, but they are also unlawful and unconstitutional. Article I, Section 8, of the U.S. Constitution, delegates to Congress (not a banking corporation) the power "to coin money, and regulate the value thereof."

Further, Article I, Section 10, of the U.S. Constitution, expressly prohibits States from declaring irredeemable paper (or anything but gold and silver coin) to be "tender in payment of debts."

The dollar was on the gold standard until 1933, and the silver standard until 1968, but this posed a genuine problem for the international bankers...they could not create gold or silver out of thin air...but paper was another matter.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Bruton v. Rhodes that "lawful money of the United States could only be gold and silver coin, or that which by law is made its equivalent, so as to be exchangeable therefor at par and on demand, and does not include a currency which, though nominally exchangeable for coin at its face value, is not redeemable on demand."

Prior to 1963, Federal Reserve Notes were defined by law as an "obligation of the United States", and were "Redeemable in Lawful Money At The After Treasury Or At Any Federal Reserve Bank". After 1963, the "redeemable" promise disappeared from the face of the Federal Reserve Notes—contrary to Article I, Section 10, of the U.S. Constitution, the above Supreme Court ruling, and also Statute 31 U.S. Coinage Act 371.

Incredibly, there has never been a comprehensive outside audit conducted on the Federal Reserve System.

If the government does not control the Federal Reserve System...Who does?

The Federal Reserve System has been headed by members of the Council on Foreign Relations for (at least) the past 28 years.

And who heads the Council on Foreign Relations? One of the international bankers...David Rockefeller is Chairman.

Paul C. Wilson,
Norfolk, Va.

Cop Bashing Bills

Editor:

I agree that legislative bills protecting our Virginia Beach police officers from assaults are far more important worrying about Beach children making terrorist bombs.

The Virginia Beach Sun, I believe, is most genuinely interested in the safety and welfare of the Virginia Beach community.

Why doesn't the Beacon care more?

FRB A Failure

Editor:

Today's Virginia Beach bankers and economists would have us believe that the cost of living keeps going up because there are too many dollars chasing too few goods. They would have us believe that our market place has turned into a giant auction where consumers frantically outbid each other in a price war over available goods and services. Think of the last time you purchased anything. Was there a crowd gathering around you and offering to pay a higher price for the product or service you were about to purchase?

The television talk shows are something else. The pipe totting economists and bankers tell us that "our inflation problems are caused because we all have too much money to spend." Personally, I'd like to know where all this money is. Perhaps some of the bankers who give this advice have a guilty conscience. They tell us that high interest rates are a painful medicine for our inflation problem. But is it a painful medicine to the bankers who collect all these interest rates?

Consider these facts. In 1981, the money supply (M1) grew about 50 billion dollars. However, the national debt grew about 600 billion dollars. There is no tangible evidence anywhere in the marketplace that there is an abundance of dollars. Car dealers are offering rebates. There are sales and discounts everywhere to sell merchandise. Farmers and businessmen continue to fold up and close their doors. Unemployment lines continue to grow. No, it is not a growing money supply that causes inflation, but a growing national debt, that is fueled directly by high interest rates. Today, high interest rates are directly increasing the national debt by a staggering sum. The total public and private debt of 3900 billion early in 1981 has turned into a 4500 billion debt at the end of 1981. The higher the interest rates, the faster the national debt grows. Consider that all debts are secured. That is, they are attached to something. A mortgage note is attached to a house. An auto loan is attached to a car. All increased indebtedness is, therefore, passed on to the next buyer of that home or car. Higher interest rates mean that you owe more money to your creditors and it costs more money for everything you buy or sell.

Interest rates add to the rate of inflation because they impose a direct cost increase on all goods and services produced and sold. Take a 45,000 mortgage at 6% for 30 years. Your monthly payment would be $288 per month. If you increase the interest rate on that same mortgage to 15%, your monthly payments climb to $568 per month. At the 6% interest rate loan, the total amount you pay off your loan in 30 years is $103,680. At 15% interest rate, the total amount you will pay on your mortgage in 30 years increases to $204,480. By the use of simple mathematics, you can now see why higher interest rates have increased the rate of inflation by increasing the cost of living thereby causing you to owe more and to own less. In addition to increasing the cost of living, high interest rates have created the worst economic conditions since the great depression. It is time that these economic policies, imposed on us by the independent Federal Reserve Board, be recognized for what they are a colossal failure.

Lose Clay, Lose An Asset

Editor:

I read with interest the column "Second Opinion" by Mr. Clay in the issue dated March 10th.

One portion of it dealt with the bureaucratic nomenclature and specifically "target communities, neighborhoods," etc. The article was most helpful when I began to read on page 6 the article "Community Development Money Discussed." The "target" jargon appeared no less than 14 times.

Not being a resident of Virginia Beach, I have had no exposure to Mr. Clay before. It seems that Tidewater is losing a valuable asset.

Very truly yours,
James N. Garrett, Jr.,

Powerful Words

Editor:

Sam Clay's "Second Opinion" on the English language only serves to reinforce what I have surmised for years.

Words are the most powerful tools on earth. Words create love. Words cause hate. Words cause war. Actions precipitate expressive language which manifests itself into more outwardly actions, which in turn calls for more words.

Words, in themselves, are harmless. Words, like a gun, are no more dangerous, powerful, or meaningful than is the person employing their use. Words, like statistics, can mislead, confuse, anger or appease, satisfy, or perpetuate.

Finally, words are more powerful than nuclear weapons, in that, we must always remember the decision to push The Button will be made verbally, and, only after the pathetic actions of stupid Mankind warrants it.

The Princess Anne High School Marching Cavaliers

Marching To The Tune Of Success

By Jackie Matthews,
Sun Correspondent

The Princess Anne High School Band, 120 members strong, with the well deserved title "The Fabulous Marching Cavaliers," have enjoyed a history of outstanding competition success.

The Cavaliers have been competing for approximately 10 years. Their reputation for audience pleasing performances is well known. One of many memorable awards received was the 1977-78-79 Queens Cup they retired to their trophy case from The Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester, Va.

The Fabulous Cavaliers are still marching to the tune of success. Since September they have earned 17 trophies, the results of many hours of hard work. In the open class competition at Severa Park, Maryland, P.A., took third place band, second place flags, rifles, and second place overall, receiving $300. October 3 they attended The Richmond Band Day sponsored by the University of Richmond placing first in overall, first in Division 1, flags, drumline and second place in drum majors and rifles.

On Oct. 10 at the Mount Vernon Invitation Marching Band Classic they placed third in their class and placed fourth against 15 top state bands. Oct. 17, attending the Tidewater Invitational Competition at Indian River High School, the band placed first in their class with $350 prize and took second overall and third percussion. At the ODU Marching Band Classic on Oct. 31 with a superior rating of 112, P.A. took first place in Band, percussion, flags and rifles. Going to Cary, N.C. for the 23rd Annual Cary Band Day, Nov. 14 the band, flags and rifles in their division.

The Fabulous Marching Cavaliers is directed by Joseph Ligart. Drum instructor is R. King and Samuel Reynolds is the sponsor for the color guard. Billy Huddleston, senior and Bill Westbrook, junior, are the drum majors. The guard commanders are Carolyn Lowenthal, Holly Jones, and Sylvia Edwards.

The guard is presently working on their indoor program. This will be presented at the P.A. basketball games.

A grand season closes with a 1,700 mile trip to compete in the Festival of Music in Montreal, Canada.

General Assembly Report From Virginia Beach Delegate Glenn McClanan

The 1982 Session of the Virginia General Assembly concludes this Saturday. Permit me to share with you some of the results.

Legislation that I personally had the honor to be the chief sponsor of included:

Water - House Bill 204 establishes a permanent Virginia Water Resources Research Center at VPI & SU in Blacksburg, which will provide an additional State effort to work with the Water Control Board in matters including water resources management and distribution so vital to Virginia Beach.

Education - HJR 93 puts the Virginia General Assembly on record as approving the concept of rewarding Virginia public school teachers on the basis of performance.

Discrimination against members of armed forces - House Bill 930 provides that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board licenses may not discriminate against persons because of their membership in the Armed Forces of the United States.

Street Closures - House Bill 424 provides that those seeking to close public streets must at least advertise the fact on two different occasions in a local newspaper, and not merely post a notice on a bulletin board at the Courthouse, as was the law previously.

Workfare - HJR 31, requested by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and others, helped expedite the passage of legislation directing the Virginia Board of Social Services to implement a statewide program where the presumption will be that all able bodied welfare recipients will provide public service work in exchange for the welfare monies they receive.

Extra oil company fees for credit card usage - House Bill 501 prohibits oil company credit card processing fees, such as the 3% fee imposed by Texaco in November, 1981, to the substantial detriment of the gas station owners and the public, unless they grant a discount for cash in an equal amount.

Other significant actions of the 1982 General Assembly Session, with my support, include:

Auto inspections - After July 1, cars will only have to be state inspected annually.

Drunk driving - Substantial additional penalties have been imposed for those convicted of drunk driving.

Education - Additional funding is being provided for the education of each pupil in our public school system. However, the amount of funding that will be available is not nearly as much as I had hoped for.

Taxation - All major tax increase proposals were defeated except for an effort to provide some additional funds for grossly overburdened roads in fast growth communities like Virginia Beach and other special State highway needs.

Trollies To Be Shifted

Sunshine Special Is Fading Away

The Sunshine Special seemed like a good idea. It provided mass transportation to the beach from various sections of the city. Unfortunately, the masses never materialized.

Consequently, after two years of operation under the Tidewater Regional Transit (TRT) and one year under the City of Virginia Beach, the Special will be discontinued this summer. The two "trolley," which are really buses, will be shifted to the Beach trolley fleet which already has the masses—unless the Parks and Recreation Department or the TRT can come up with some sort of compromise that won't lose so much money for the city.

Each ride costs the city $1.11 in subsidies.

The Special operates from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in season but attracted only 176 riders last summer, averaging six riders an hour, Interim City Manager Giles Dodd told City Council at an informal meeting Monday afternoon.

Calvin Whitehurst, Parks and Recreation

Director, said, "I don't bet we've got more than 200 who want to use that service."

With the gas prices down, Dodd said, he did not anticipate this summer will be as good as last.

The Beach service which provides a shuttle service at the Beachfront, on the other hand, costs the city only 24 cents per ride. The Sunshine Special trollies will be added to the Beach fleet of five. The Beach service costs 25 cents a ride.

Milton Woodhouse of the Parks and Recreation bus division, said Parks and Recreation has tried to alternate the trollies between the Kempsville and Green Run areas, but the deficit remains.

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that the service "started out with good possibilities."

Dodd said the trollies were designed for tourists and that Virginia Beach should rely for other transportation on the TRT. He said that if the TRT wants to take the service back, he would consider it, "but they had fewer riders than we did."

Councilman Reid Ervin said that regardless of who operated the service, the loss would be the same, just moved from one category to another. The city pays the same subsidy regardless.

Woodhouse said he would discuss the possibility of limiting the service.

The Sunshine Special was designed as a service for residents and boasted a rack for surfboards.

Correction

In last week's 1982 Virginia Beach Election Candidates chart, page 12, a proofreading error occurred beside the name of Bayside Borough candidate Louis R. Jones. Jones is the owner and president of a local funeral home but is not a retired school teacher nor a member of any mental health or social services boards.

Also, in last week's editorial directed towards the Beacon, the next to the last paragraph charged the Beacon with "inflaming." City Council, the word should have read "inflaming." The transposition of words resulted in composition.

Dream dreams of their fulfillment
And the sad you helped to sing.
then think of ways of making thises good dreams to come true.
The good Lord needs more dreamers
Yes, the Lord has need of you.

He needs your hands to minister
To the sick and insecure,
Your life to be a sermon
How to love and to endure,
He needs your voice to tell men.

The humble Gospel story
And to spread abroad the knowledge
Of His great love and glory.

Beach Sports

Beach High School Baseball Preview

Beach Sports Beat

By Ronnie Greene and Joey Caruthers

With the 1982 Virginia Beach baseball season opening within two weeks, we felt that it would be appropriate to give a rundown of each Beach district high school team.

But we decided to go one step further, and have a Beach district coaches poll to correspond with the team by team descriptions.

Joey and I polled a number of Beach district baseball coaches, and asked them to give us first through seventh place predictions for city high schools.

Here are the teams, listed in order, with key information about each.

Kellam Knights: The Knights are the overwhelming choice to capture the district championship, largely because they return nine players who started from last year's third place team, and also because they have Coach Wayne Sykes at the helm.

Sykes is in his ninth year coaching Kellam, has never had a losing year, and is considered to many as the top baseball coach in the area.

Sykes, himself, seems pleased about his team's progress.

"I feel that we have excellent potential for a championship run," he said.

Honorable mention All-Beach pitcher Eric Henry (7-3 lifetime) returns for the knights on the mound, joined by Junior fireballer Todd Barnes (1-1; 1.31 ERA).

Kellam is also strong behind the plate, as both Mark Hogge (.333 batting average) and Tony Neydon return capable of catching.

Leftfielder David Wells (.288) and centerfielder Jimmy Driscoll also return, and both were honorable mention All-Beach a year ago as juniors.

But there is one weak link to an otherwise solid unit. Junior pitcher John Jones moved out of the area and won't pitch this year for Kellam. As a sophomore, Jones sported a 1.02 ERA and was named honorable mention All-Beach.

Kempsville Chiefs: "We have our sights set on winning the district championship," exclaimed Kempsville Coach Tim Albert, in his first year at Kempsville after coaching at Plaza Junior High School.

The Chiefs do, indeed, appear to have enough talent returning to make a legitimate run at the title.

Back this year is All-District pitcher John Campbell, a lefthander who also batted .360 last season.

Other returnees include football stars Danny Grubb (cf), Kerry Pritchard (of), and D. J. Dozier (ss-of), along with highly touted catcher Matt Hudgins.

Green Run Stallions: Green Run first year Coach Guy Hyatt forces good things for his Stallion team.

"I'm picking Kellam to finish first," he explained, "but if our pitching holds up, I feel we can win it."

Many people feel the Stallions boast some of the top area talent, such as Pat Sipe and David Ware. Sipe is a two-time All-District first team selection who batted a solid .385 last year. This year, the senior first baseman has been listening to pro offers to play baseball.

"Pat is an excellent hitter," said Hyatt, "and the pro scouts really seem to be after him." Another standout is Ware, who has been injured throughout his high school career.

Should Ware stay healthy this year, he would get the chance to fin his "superstar" potential, which could help Green Run considerably.

Other Stallion holdovers include Rick Heine (3b-of), Jeff Woolard (3b-2b), Frank Cisarik (p), James Lee (ss), and John Biechura (lf).

Kellam Pitcher Eric Henry, a senior

the Patriot team that made its way to the Eastern Regional Finals in 1981.

The Patriots lost almost every starter to graduation last year, but do return second team All-Beach District pitcher Brian Purcell.

Pitching in the shadow of Brian Augsburg, Purcell managed a 5-3 record while displaying excellent control.

Other promising returnees are Brian Betz, Perry Baldwin (of), and Kevin Shondell (3b-p). Though he lost alot of starters to graduation, Coach Norbey Wilson, nonetheless, appears pleased with his new unit.

"I feel we have the best group of sophomores this year than in any other year I've coached at First Colonial," said Wilson, now in his third year.

"Also," he added, "we have the best team speed I've ever seen on a high school club."

Princess Anne Cavaliers: Although many coaches feel the Cavaliers aren't returning enough quality players to be considered a challenge for district honors, some feel the strength of righthanders Jeff Ballance and Mike Halsey can carry them to numerous victories.

"With Jeff Ballance healthy, they could be a serious contender this year," Kellam's Wayne Sykes said.

Last year, Princess Anne was behind only First Colonial in the standings until Ballance got hurt and missed the end of the season.

As a Junior, Ballance, a football star headed for Virginia Tech, was 4-3 with three 1 run losses and batted .280, tops among returning Cavaliers.

Halsey was 4-2 in his sophomore year. Another pitcher is righthander Bob Diehl (3-2).

But as solid as the Cavaliers are on the mound, they are just as weak around the field.

"We lost our whole infield to graduation," reminded Cavalier Coach Don VanBenschoten.

In fact, the only returning starter who is not a pitcher is outfielder Joey Funaro.

"We could finish high in the standings," said Van Benschoten, "but it is too early to tell, because we have alot of question marks."

Bayside Marlins: A young team last year, Bayside will open their season with an experienced but unproven unit.

Coach Bob Schmidt's Marlins were weak in pitching last year, and need good work at this position if they have any hopes of a successful season.

Cox Falcons: Considered the "mystery-team" of the Beach district, Cox will open their season with very few known faces.

Hanbury Leaving All Options Open

Fee Questions Resurface

By Lee Caltier
Sun Reporter

The issue of developers' fees, which cost a city manager his job, is still around to plague Virginia Beach City Council.

A city council member asked Council for a $79,000 refund in sewer hook-up fees on the basis that developers of Pavilion Towers received a $116,000 discount on fees.

Edward J. Cation, III, attorney for Coastal Inn Associates, developers of the Holiday Inn and Executive Center at Newtown and Greenwich Roads, said that his clients had to pay for the full hook-up fees in that he was required to pay $79,000 more than he would have been required to pay if given the same consideration as Pavilion Towers.

Pavilion Towers was granted a developers' discount provided by the city's system of fees in cases where construction will be beneficial to the city.

City Manager George L. Hanbury awarded the discount of Pavilion Towers last November but did not report the action of Council until January. His actions led to his resignation under pressure. Council, however, decided later that Hanbury's actions were proper and legal and allowed the discount to stand.

Over 2,000 runners recently participated in the 10th Annual Shanrock Marathon. The 26 mile race started at Pavilion Towers, ran along the beach, through the Sandhills, past the boardwalk, across Rude's Inferno, Red Wing Park and back across Rude's Inferno to the start/finish line at Pavilion Towers. Former Virginia Beach City Manager George Hanbury reflects over stormy last days in office; discusses plans for future

Sun Editor

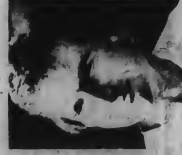

Serving as Virginia Beach's chief executive for seven years was the pinnacle of George Hanbury's professional career. But for now, those days of power are behind him.

Since resigning under pressure from his $66,000 a year city manager's post on Feb. 10, George Lafayette Hanbury II now spends much of his spare time jogging around his neighborhood and working out in local gyms.

"In the early mornings while I'm out running I find myself thinking about things to do at the office," Hanbury said from his home in the Chelsea section of Virginia Beach, which is now up for sale. "I keep forgetting I'm not working in the office any longer."

Hanbury initially stepped down on Jan. 19, with plans to stay on until Feb. 30. He was then offered him from office on Feb. 10, just months before this Spring's sweeping councilmanic elections.

"I never forgot the power of Council, although they thought I did. That's why I bowed out gracefully" - Hanbury

Hanbury

Council members opposed to Hanbury are unyielding in the belief that their decision to oust Hanbury was valid, charging him with failure to keep Council members properly and adequately informed on some Council matters. Likewise, many members of the Virginia Beach community adamantly believe Hanbury alone has contributed greatly to the success of this littoral resort city.

Hanbury Undecided On His Future

and that firing him was a grave mistake. Public campaigns to reinstate Hanbury as city manager are also underway.

Hanbury, a 38 year old Norfolk native, is now between jobs and told The Sun he is unsure what his future holds.

"I've got all options open," Hanbury said. "I'm living now as if I had no job in the works," although he has applications out to various interests.

Would Hanbury return to work for the City of Virginia Beach?

"I will make my decision based on what comes my way," he said. "If something comes along that is bent for me and my family, and provides me with good, upward professional mobility, I will take it. But I'm not sitting and wishing for something to occur. I'm not a gambler."

If Hanbury is not gambling with his future, he did gamble in the past. City managers serve at the pleasure of City Council, which means Hanbury, in essence, had 11 bosses to please. He was an aggressive city manager, waging that his civic accomplishments would outweigh the complaints against him. It was a daring bet that did not pay off, and his job was at stake.

"I never forgot the power of City Council," Hanbury said, "although they thought I did. That's why I bowed out gracefully when they asked me to resign."

A city manager must feel a certain sense of dedication and concern for the issues and problems he or she confronts daily. But that sense of caring must not supersede the manager's professional boundaries, and it must not interfere with that person's relationship with his superiors.

"There must be a certain degree of objectivity in this occupation," Hanbury, who holds a master's degree in public administration from Old Dominion University, Norfolk, said. "If I feel strongly about a recommendation I plan to present Council on a civic matter, a recommendation that I feel will be an asset to the city, I will try to persuade and even argue with the council to accept my suggestion," Hanbury said. "But as soon as Council makes its decision, I support that decision and forget my arguments. If Council adopts a recommendation contrary to my own, I would, and have, fought just as strongly to defend and support Council's decision."

The job of city manager, according to Hanbury, can be using beyond most people's imagination. The city manager is hired to produce great accomplishments for a city, at the lowest possible cost to its taxpaying residents. The city manager's actions and decisions, however, are in many instances subject to City Council approval. But not always. That fine line between telling Council members too much, or not enough, finally wore thin between Hanbury and City Council.

"The most difficult aspect of serving as city manager in Virginia Beach is trying to convince 11 different people, in a manner that they each will understand, to vote a certain way on an issue affecting the entire city," Hanbury said. "It's like when 11 different people see the same automobile accident. They all saw the exact same thing, but all the witnesses would give different observations on how it occurred."

To complicate matters, Hanbury's interaction with Council, and another organized body to be reckoned with, the Press, is oftentimes strangled by time limitations.

"It is very difficult in short informal City Council sessions to fully explain all the issues which Council members wish," Hanbury said. "The informal session began getting almost as long as regular sessions, and still some members wanted to know more. I only saw the City Council members for brief periods of time during the week. It's hard to keep part-time legislators as informed as the reporters who were at City Hall daily nipping at my heels for news. The competition between Virginian Pilot and Ledger Star reporters to get a story first was unbelievable. I tried to call council members over the telephone on many matters."

"The job of managing the city is not all that difficult," Hanbury continued, "provided you have efficient department heads, and they are in turn certain of the direction in which the city is to follow. The real challenge is to speak articulately, coherently, and succinctly so that 11 different people understand their decision and feel comfortable and confident with it."

Hanbury said that from his first days on the job as city manager, doubt was in the air as to how long he would remain in the position.

"I've never had a honeymoon since I've been here," Hanbury, a Great Bridge High School honor graduate said. "It's always been kinda rough. But it's never been a dull moment. I have no regrets. I love it."

Hanbury said serving as Virginia Beach's city manager, at his age, "was the finest thing of my life and the new heights of my career," noting that he is the city's youngest city manager. "I grew with the city," he said.

The most dismal day of Hanbury's career was "the day I was asked to leave," he added.

"What the public didn't like, I think, was the way Council handled the matter when they fired me . . . people thought I was an honest man who had gotten a bad deal" - Hanbury

Hanbury considered himself as a 12th member of Council, dealing with issues ranging from street sweeping to million dollar business ventures. Because of Hanbury's wide range of professional interests and obligations, he became a well known public figure in Virginia Beach. But some of the same Virginia Beach special interest groups which Hanbury and his office served, may have also been instrumental in his dismissal.

"Certain factions of some special interest groups may have convinced Council members that dismissing me was the right thing to do," Hanbury said. "But the general outcry from the public after Council asked me to resign was 'no, don't resign.'"

"I heard the silent majority speak," he continued, "it was very heartwarming. I was definitely surprised at the public support because I didn't really think anyone noticed or cared about what George Hanbury did. I thought it was just a small minority out there writing letters. Some of the people I never heard of; people who probably never wrote letters at all. But I received a cross-section of support from cops, tradesmen, school teachers and many other members of the community."

"I don't think the issue was whether or not giving the Pavilion Towers sewer line reductions was correct on my behalf," he continued. "It was proven that what I did was alright. What the public didn't like, I think, was the way Council handled the matter when they fired me, and then getting me to leave earlier than planned. I think the people thought I was an honest man who had gotten a bad deal."

Hanbury said that following his resignation many Beach residents tried to convince him to run for a City Council seat. He decided against it. He said he has spent the last few weeks assessing, and pondering what he will do in the future.

"I never went around thinking that my job was in jeopardy," he said. "I knew that if a city manager did a good job, he would always be wanting to do new things. There would always be danger of losing my job from bucking the established norm."

"I did not dwell on the fact that I might get fired," he continued, "because that is like a person who has cancer; no one wants to be around them because they may be depressed about it. I just move straight ahead and live life at its best. I could have done things slower and lasted longer at my job, but I would never have accomplished as much in twice the length of time. Feeling the heat is part of the job. I lasted as city manager longer than most."

Hanbury, who has been a very private person since his early childhood days, can recall what, in his estimation, was one of his greatest accomplishments while working as Virginia Beach's city manager.

"Possibly one of the things of which I'm the most proud was changing the city's interest rating for buying municipal bonds from A to AA," he said. "It was an action which occurred about five years ago, but saved the city about $30 million in bond interest which we would have had to pay if the rating had not been changed."

"It was exciting going to Wall Street, meeting and convincing the investors and bankers to lower our rates."

Hanbury also looks back with pride on other accomplishments, such as the perpetuation of the Pavilion Arts and Conference Center, public libraries, recreation centers, and Lynnhaven Mall in spite of what Hanbury calls "strong sentiment against it." Hanbury also boasts over the city's lowest-in-the-state tax rates.

As city manager, Hanbury strived to be creative and assertive in his role, hoping to convince Council to adopt measures which would benefit to Virginia Beach, and add to its diversity.

"A city manager must also be diplomatic in his approach with the community and Council, and act as a liaison between the two parties," he said.

Because Virginia Beach is still a developing city, only 20 years young, as opposed to older more established cities such as Richmond and Norfolk, the occupational demands on a city manager are greater.

"Virginia Beach is not static, or stagnant," Hanbury observed. "We're constantly moving, dynamic, and are making decisions daily which will enhance the quality of life for Virginia Beach residents and visitors 30 years down the road."

Hanbury envisions Virginia Beach, even in the year 2,000, still with sandy beaches but also fighting a never ending battle with shore erosion. He also admbrates more oceanfront public parking; more underground utilities; more elegant hotels; continued low real estate and personal property tax rates; and continuing its reputation as one of the finest recreational areas in the East Coast.

"Virginia Beach will become the dominant social, political, and cultural city in Virginia and the area," Hanbury predicts.

Communication

Hanbury knows that progress usually arrives at the expense of controversy, and often a city manager stands alone in the hot spotlight.

"There is not a municipal job as demanding as that of city manager's," Hanbury said. "There is a myriad of activities to which he must concern himself, and answer for. From budgets, personnel matters, grievances, and street sweeping to financial computer record keeping and procedures on law enforcement. The city manager's office, with so much going on in it, is really the central brain network of the city."

Asked whether a reallocation of his time and responsibility as city manager would have affected how he communicated and interacted with Council, Hanbury said, "I ask myself almost every day, 'If I again had the decision of communicating the Pavilion Towers line reductions to Council or not, would I have done differently?' The answer is still no. I would not have communicated that point. Everybody had gotten the lower fees."

"I communicated with Council to the utmost. In fact, some of them asked me if they really had to know so much about some things. The city manager has a hard job determining when he is communicating too much with Council or too little. But it is essential that there be good communication between the manager and Council. How essential, though, is it for all 11 council members to be experts in fields Council needs not address itself? They should know every available detail of the issues coming before them. But only those before them. Many never do that. That's why they have a city manager. That person is hired to be the city's shaker and mover."

If Hanbury was asked to return as city manager, and if he accepted the offer, he said there would be little change from how he had done things in the past.

"Nothing would necessarily change," he said. "I would sit down again with Council members and see how they wanted to conduct things. But my coming back, right now, is a real long shot."

Hanbury left his job with the knowledge that what he accomplished will prevail in Virginia Beach, most likely, longer than he.

"Anyone in public office must enjoy the thrill of knowing that you have helped benefit mankind and helped to make life better to live on Earth," he said. "If you feel that, your life can't be better."

Hanbury's name and face has figured largely in recent local Press accounts. The panoply of aroused public and editorial opinion helped Hanbury gain an insight as to his role and image in the Virginia Beach community.

"There's always differences of opinion, and there are thousands who may not agree with you," he said. "But in retrospect, I think most people in Virginia Beach trusted me and knew where George Hanbury was coming from on the issues and how he stood. I stayed consistent in my decisions and did not change horses in midstream. People found that I could be trusted, which in turn allowed for a very good personal relationship with the community, and much support."

Hanbury Introspection

Hanbury views the City of Virginia Beach, metaphorically, as a human being in its maturing stages.

"Virginia Beach is every bit of a 19 or 20 year old person," he said. "We were a baby. Then grew to adolescence. Now we're in young adulthood and have made mistakes like any growing person would. We have made some possibly harmful decisions. But we are still growing up. A city is not born with an identity. You create one over the years."

With a new slate of council members emerging after

"These last few weeks have given me an opportunity for an introspection of myself. What career will I pursue? I could continue in the same field . . . or I could make a 180 degree turn" - Hanbury the upcoming elections, Hanbury offers them only a small bit of advice.

"The only thing I can say is that they should all work together as a team," said Hanbury. "Council will only be as strong as the sum of its parts. Like any legislative body, change can't occur without the work and cooperation of others. The new Council should work together for the common good of the city."

While in office Hanbury worked with and depended on all of his assistants equally, but indicated he did rely a little more on the city's current interim City Manager Giles Dodd.

"I relied on all my assistants equally," Hanbury said, "but I may have leaned a little more on Dodd."

"Sam Clay," he continued, "is a very intelligent, gifted person with a lot of talents. He is a superb person and will be a real asset to Fairfax County."

Family of tradition

Hanbury was 29 when his father, a longshoreman, died. His mother, a homemaker, died when he was 31. Hanbury still has a brother and sister.

"We were a very close family," Hanbury said. "My parents instilled in me a sense of pride and accomplishment."

"My mother instilled in me a sense to acquire a goal beyond my present status; to lift yourself up. To respect the rights of human beings."

Hanbury credits his mother with nurturing his love of history and local government. He recalls a sightseeing trip the family once took while he was young.

"My mother always said the State of Virginia was the mother of presidents and from that notion I developed a true sense of history and tradition of this area," Hanbury said.

"I remember once when I was about seven or eight years old and living in Berkeley," he continued, "we had no car but took a bus trip to D.C. My mother and I climbed the steps to the Washington Monument to see the building stone donated from Virginia. Since then I've always appreciated government and history."

Hanbury always tried to separate his public and private life. He is a family person, and dearly loves his children: Melissa, 9, a fourth grader at John B. Dey Elementary School; and Trey, 12, a sixth grader at John B. Dey.

"I have tried to teach my children to always be proud," he said.

"I don't think the publicity has affected them. In fact, it's probably made them more civic minded. They have a very good understanding of local government. Better than I did at their age."

Hanbury will continue attempting to achieve higher goals.

Hanbury with his children, Trey and Melissa

"I heard the silent majority speak. It was very heartwarming. I didn't really think anyone noticed or cared about what George Hanbury did" - Hanbury

"I have attained many of the goals I had set for myself," he said. Yet there are many new goals to establish and attain. My personal pursuits, like the city's, should include much diversity.

"These last few weeks have given me an opportunity to reflect on life, and for an introspection of myself. What career will I pursue? Public, private or government? I could continue in the same field or a related one. Or I might make a 180 degree turn. I want to do a multitude of things."

Hanbury commented on the recent salary increase of Virginia Beach Public Schools Superintendent Dr. E. E. Brice. Brice's salary rose from $65,300 to $69,200. Hanbury was making $66,000 when he was fired. Dodd now makes $62,400.

"The chief executive of the city should make more money than the superintendent of schools," Hanbury said. "I know of no job that is as demanding as the city manager's. The school board is not publicly elected. I don't begrudge Brice's salary, but the education department is just one department within the entire city governmental system."

Hanbury said he would have rather been fired during the warm, fun-filled Summer months, and "not in the bleak of Winter."

More Hanbury background

Hanbury was born on Sept. 20, 1943 in Norfolk, Va. He is 6'1" tall and weighs 170 pounds.

His education includes masters degree in public administration, 1977, Old Dominion University, Norfolk; bachelor of science, public administration, VPI & SU, Blacksburg; and VCU management courses, Richmond.

He is a member of the International City Management Association; The American Management Association; and the American Society for Public Administration.

His occupational background includes industrial cooperative training coordinator, Chesapeake; evening professor at ODU, 1969 - 1970; assistant to city manager, Norfolk, 1968 - 1970; assistant city manager, Virginia Beach, 1970 - 1974; city manager, Virginia Beach, November, 1974 to Feb., 1982.

Hanbury has been selected as the 1975 Outstanding Young Man of Virginia Beach; 1976 Outstanding Young Man of Virginia; listed in Outstanding Young Men of America, 1977.

At Great Bridge High School, Hanbury participated in football, track, wrestling, monogram club, Hi-Y, and band.

Beacon, Chamber Seeking Responses

Candidates Prepare For Questions

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

It's time for Virginia Beach City Council candidates to brush up on their spelling, punctuation and syntax. The Beacon, as well as the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce are seeking formal responses to political questions from local candidates for the May 4 election. The Beacon is asking five questions. Answers will be printed verbatim in the Beacon in April.

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce is printing a special tabloid political edition, featuring solicited responses from the candidates.

The Virginia Beach Sun will also compile a list of candidate questions which will be submitted to candidates for response and later printed.

The Beacon requests that candidates limit answers to 75 words per question.

Water

Virginia Beach, which purchases nearly all its water from Norfolk, has been examining several options in its quest for an independent, long-term water supply. Some potential sources include the development of a central Virginia reservoir in conjunction with the Appomattox River Water Authority, a regional system piping water from Western Tidewater, desalting, and local groundwater. What do you favor as the answer to Virginia Beach's water needs, and why?

Roads

Rapid growth has placed tremendous burdens on roads that were designed and built years ago when Virginia Beach was a rural county. Lagging gasoline tax revenues have reduced the amount of state highway construction money that will be available to localities in the future. The city has begun borrowing money through bond issues to finance roadbuilding on its own. Are adequate roads crucial enough to justify additional debt, or should Virginia Beach curtail its highway construction program?

Education

Are teachers in the Virginia Beach public school system adequately paid? If not, would you raise real estate or other taxes to finance salary increases if additional revenue is required? Or would you cut back other services to finance teacher pay raises, and if so, which ones?

Growth/Economic Development

What approach should Virginia Beach take to growth and economic development? To what extent, if any, should the city promote residential, commercial and industrial development? Or should growth be limited?

Council Leadership

City Council has been criticized for its factionalism and a lack of consensus on goals for the city. Do you agree with that criticism? If so, how would you go about trying to correct the situation? If not, why not?

New Sun Facelift

The Virginia Beach Sun has had a facelift.

The Sun's new front page masthead was designed by Mike Henry, a prize winning architect with the prize winning Virginia Beach architectural firm, the Design Collaborative, Laszlo Arany, AIA, president.

VBEA Endorsements

The Virginia Beach Education Association, with about 2,400 local members, has endorsed six candidates for the May 4 City Council election.

Robert G. Jones and G. A. Anderson, at-large.
Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., Kempville Borough.

Pickett Wants Seat In Senate

Owen B. Pickett, a 10-year member of the Virginia General Assembly and immediate past chairman of the state's Democratic Party, has announced his candidacy for the United States Senate.

Appearing before reporters and a large crowd of hometown supporters at a breakfast in the Cavalier Hotel Oceanfront here, Pickett made it clear that he will run on his record of fiscal responsibility in the General Assembly and that he believes Virginians want and need his kind of conservative approach to government spending in the U.S. Senate.

Pickett said he wants to take "to Washington the record written by this Commonwealth, the record written by the General Assembly."

Sun Classifieds Get Results

We recently spoke with Sharon Salley, manager of Apartment Headquarters in Chesapeake about her classified ad in the Virginia Beach Sun and The Chesapeake Post.

Sharon said "We chose to 'run' an ad in the Sun/Post Classifieds for one main reason. We're locally owned, locally operated, a local business and we wanted to advertise in a local paper. We get lots of calls from people in both Virginia Beach and Chesapeake."

Sharon told us what we had known for a long time; the Virginia Beach Sun is the best way to get local response.

It's easy to place your ad. Call 486-3430 and ask for Leanne.

A 20-word ad is $4 a week and your fourth week is free.

Corrections

In the March 10 issue of The Virginia Beach Sun, we erroneously listed Gay E. Vick, candidate for City Council from the Bayside Borough, as being affiliated with the "Bayside Pines Civic League."

It has been reported that there is no civic league by that name. Vick is a resident of Baylake Beach, living on Sandy Bay Drive.

William F. Parkerson is a Virginia Senator from Henrico County. He was accidentally identified as a delegate in last week's issue.

The Sun also accidentally mixed paragraphs in the third and fourth columns of the same story. We apologize for the inconvenience to readers.

Letters Welcomed

The Virginia Beach Sun welcomes and encourages letters to the editor.

Letters should be handwritten or typewritten, double-spaced and must include your name, address, and phone number.

Giles Wants To Save Money

Virginia Beach Interim City Manager

Giles G. Dodd is leaving it up to the various city departments to find ways to squeeze as much savings as possible out of their current budgets to apply to the 1982-83 operating budget.

At an informal meeting of Council Monday evening, Dodd reported on the budget process without saying what the budget will be. Council will find out on March 31 at 5 p.m. when the proposed budget will be distributed at a special meeting.

Dodd said he wanted to make as much money available as possible to apply to next year's budget. He said that while a hiring and purchasing freeze is a good way to bring money in, the departments may be tempted to spend their 12-month allocations in eight months to avoid giving up any funds.

He chose, instead, he said, to set targets and leave it up to the departments to find ways to end the year with a balance.

He said that he had a brainstorming session with the departments on cost cutting measures and options for cutting next year's budget as well. He said that some of the measures will not be immediately reflected in the upcoming budget, but should have some impact on reducing the rate of increase in the next budget and in future budgets.

The School Board had submitted a $119 million budget, 13 percent greater than its $102 million budget for the current year.

The current overall city budget this year is $238 million.

A public hearing has been scheduled for April 20, a first reading of the budget ordinances on May 3, and a second reading on May 10. Workshops are scheduled for April 6, 13 and 22 at 5 p.m.

SWEEP COUNCIL CLEAN!

We, the citizens of Virginia Beach, have the constitutional right to speak out against ineffective government and the forced resignation of City Manager, George Hanbury.

City Council has proven by its latest actions of February 8, 1982 they are not interested in what the concerned citizens in this city have to say.

It seems the only time City Council is interested in the opinions of the residents of Virginia Beach is at voting time.

So Unite ....

AND LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD LOUD AND CLEAR—
SWEEP COUNCIL CLEAN!

Make sure the people responsible for inefficient government and the incompetence concerning City Manager, George Hanbury do not regain their seats on the City Council come May 4th.

Fee Reductions

He said that the sewer lines were put in at no cost to the Utilities Department Enterprise Fund (which makes the Department self-sustaining). The sewer line was financed with Revenue Sharing funds, he said.

He said, "We believe state law mandates that a charge made to the citizens should be uniform and that case law the opinion of the court follows that up. He said the charge of fees in no way should be arbitrary or discriminatory.

Language Festival At Lynnhaven

Goodies galore will be yours to sample at the Foreign Language Festival at Lynnhaven Mall on Saturday, March 27th from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Virginia Beach students in French, Spanish, Latin, and German classes have been cooking up exotic foods, hand-made crafts, special projects, and all sorts of realia to show you. Dressed in native costumes, students will also sing, act, and dance in the native language from 12 noon to 3 p.m. Come and treat yourself! You will certainly enjoy the foreign languages.

Continuing into the following week will be activities that will again focus on French, Spanish, German, and Latin.

The purpose of this week is to make the community and the students more aware of the value of knowing another language and the enjoyment many students experience while studying foreign languages. The elementary schools will be decorated by the secondary schools and are invited to attend numerous activities. All the hallways, cafeterias, and display cases in the secondary schools will be decorated with flags, slogans, labels, and posters. The school menu (Mighty Bite) has been translated into French, German, Latin, and Spanish. Guest speakers, native dancing, singing, international dinners, newsletters, and food samplings will be offered in the secondary schools.

For more information, contact Anne Bennett, Independence Junior High School at 460-1108 or 428-3665.

Public Hearing Scheduled

and another one will be scheduled following the public hearing.

Dodd said that action of the General Assembly will impact the school budget, but will not impact other city items. He said that General Assembly legislation limiting High Constable service fees to those of the Sheriff's Department would mean a revenue decrease of approximately $63,000 but that would depend on how many papers are served by the High Constable or the Sheriff's Department and the staff needed to do the work.

Bayside High School Senior Wins Regional Competition

Meg Dix, a senior at Bayside High and a second-year fashion design student at Vo-Tech, won the "Best in Show" award at the recent Southeastern Area Occupational Foods and Clothing competition in Wakefield. Meg's sailor dress, which she designed and made, also won "Best in Class" for children's apparel, and a woman's dress she designed won a second place award in the women's apparel category.

This week Meg is showing her fashion design skills by representing the state of Virginia at the Teen Talent competition in Boston, sponsored by Eastern Nazarene College. Meg's entry is a woman's jacket.

The southeastern Virginia competition featured the fashion design and culinary talents of high school students from eight vocational schools from Virginia Beach to Petersburg. It was sponsored by the home economics education service of the state's department of education.

Four other Vo-Tech fashion design II students

apparel; JoAnne Hewes took second in women's apparel; Donna Whiteman won a second place in women's apparel. See FOOD, Page 14

Virginia Beach Nightlife

Shamrock Marathon Notes

Roxx To Open; Beach Bands Lost

Sun Down

by LYNN SANDS

The month of March moves on with reckless abandon. Wednesday night there was plenty of blarney at Rogue's as the loose ladies celebrated Saint Patty's Day with the Mighty Majors. They did a fast version of "Super-freak" and a bawdy rendition of "Bad Mama Jama" that had Ethel and Cindy totally out of control. Errol Flynn and Robert Redford were there along with James Dean who was fresh from a fashion show at the Pavilion. Crystal had a new hairdo. Guy Morgan was dunking them on the dance floor. We missed Mr. Worels. He and his son have bought the Cave and will reopen it as The Roxx at the beginning of April. We wish them all the best in their exciting endeavor. Willie Shipp has earned the post as the new manager at Rogue's.

Over at Pascal's my date and I found Redy Mix filling in for the vacationing Hot Cakes. George Newsome on bass and John Dungan on lead guitar were doing some fine licks. "On the Prowl" was one of the great songs they did. Mr. Whittington was there, and so was Wayne who wrestled with the tambourine and the cowbell on one song. Hot Cakes, Eddie couldn't seem to get away.

Across the street Tom Farley was at the Jewish Mother and further down the road Snuff was tearing up Country Comfort while And the Jets were taking off at the Crystal. Irish revelry was evident everywhere on this Wednesday night.

Friday my date and I went to check out some of the Shamrock Marathon activities. At the Hilton Inn hospitality center runners were downing beer and bananas. Next door at Laverne's the menu featured all the spaghetti you can eat for a ridiculously high price. A few runners chose to get their carbohydrates from the great selection at Isle of Capri where Anne and Billy were piggling out on pasta and veal.

Later that night at Celebrities the Nerve was treating the full house to some very important rock and roll. The crowd and the music kept Coach Leo hopping behind the bar. Curtis was there, and the Black Brothers were boogieing all over the dance floor to blockbuster originals like "That's Right" and "The Girl Ain't Coming Tonight."

Marathon

Saturday my date and I went to see the end of the marathon. What can you say about people who run twenty-six miles in the rain and wind? I think the term is mass hysteria. We were struck by the diversification of individuals. Atlantic Avenue looked like the setting of a Fellini movie. It was interesting to notice at the finish line just how mental a marathon can be. We watched the first few hundred who crossed the line, and it was incredible to see bodies collapsing just as they ended the race as if someone was pressing an "off" button on their backs. The mind kept the body running to the end, and suddenly, like magic, the mind was gone and the body became a helpless blob of jelly. We congratulate all who participated and especially the fifty students representing Friends School who ran their hearts out.

Musicians Deleted

Sands Reviews Top Movies, Popcorn Prices

When rock and roll is in your blood it's hard to sit still for a movie, but my date and I have managed to catch the five nominees for best picture. With the Academy Awards coming up this week I thought I might mention a few things about this year's select group.

"Raiders of the Lost Ark" was by far the most refreshing and entertaining movie of the year. This is what filmdom is all about. The team of Lucas and Spielberg is the best thing to happen in the film world since Frank Capra.

and this picture deserves anything it can get just because it got viewers back in the theatres if for no other reason. The popcorn was too expensive.

"On Golden Pond" was exemplary. Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn were exceptional and both should win Oscars. Jane Fonda's role was smaller than expected, and she does not deserve an Oscar for it, but her figure gives credence to her position at the top of the best seller list. Mark Rydell could cop an award for his superb direction. This movie proves that simplicity and good writing are more important than a mega-budget. If anything was wrong with this movie, it was the high cost of the popcorn at the theatre.

"Atlantic City" was slightly off the wall, but there was a certain charm about this offbeat movie. The charm was in Burt Lancaster's excellent, touching portrayal of a has-been, small-time gangster. He won the award from the New York Film Critics' and could give Hank Fonda his only real challenge. Susan Sarandon deserves praise for her role as a woman looking for something better than the existence she has. Her quest for a better life is real, but she's not exactly the sympathetic type. Louis Malle's direction is dreamy and visual. At the end of the movie one feels nothing for Atlantic City, but it doesn't matter. It is the characters thrown into the pot who give this movie its spice. The price of the popcorn was ridiculous.

"Reds" was long, but it is Warren Beatty's most ambitious project. He has already won the Director's Guild award. The Academy has not hesitated to award him in the past, and the extent to which they favor him this year could surprise many. Diane Keaton and Jack Nicholson turn in great performances, but they will always be Annie Hall and Jack Nicholson to me. The sets and costumes are enough reason to see this movie, and the screenplay could be an easy winner. Considering the subject matter and the length, my eyes were definitely seeing red by the end of the flick. It's the kind of movie that demands a lot of popcorn, and, unfortunately, it was grossly overpriced.

"Chariots of Fire" bored me and my date silly in spite of its supreme direction, unbelievable cinematography, and incredible musical score by Vangelis. The director was known for his documentaries, and there were many times we felt we were watching the news. At one point my date asked me what was going on in the movie, and my reply was that the popcorn was gone and, sadly, our money supply. See you in the popcorn line.

Think Again About Baskets

Second Opinion

By
Sam Clay

Too often we look but don't see, speak but don't say, hear but don't listen. Ever since man has recorded his thoughts and observations on life, this lament has been one of the main themes of literature and philosophy.

Rare then is the chance to "see" something in a new light. Rarer still is the opportunity to have an everyday object shown to us in a different context—one that enables us to develop a new appreciation for and an understanding of such an object.

If familiarity doesn't always breed contempt, it does foster ignorance. Because we use an object day in and day out for one purpose, our mind-set assumes that this is the only use for it or the only way that the object can be perceived. Just as we stereotype people, we treat "things" in the same way.

Baskets have been a part of our civilization for thousands of years. Their uses and development have been categorized by anthropologists, sociologists and artists. In the last few years they have been used as a key design element by interior decorators. (We are all familiar with the many stores in our area that sell almost baskets only).

Certainly baskets have become one of the most common objects that we all live with. It is immensely refreshing and challenging therefore, to view an exhibition entitled "The Woven Basket."

Organized and sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, the exhibition is handsomely mounted in the Center's galleries located at 19th and Arctic Avenue. Open during regular gallery hours, the display will be up until March 31. Funding for the exhibition came from the Virginia Beach Art and Humanities Commission.

"Analyzing certain trends in contemporary basketmaking" is the theme of the show as stated in the catalog. From all over the country, basket makers have submitted their works. Frederick Schmid, Arts Center Director, notes that more than one half of the baskets on display come from California. Once again this state seems to lead the way in the field of contemporary crafts.

At its simplest level, the exhibition features more than 50 baskets. Each is unique. Each is distinctive—its distinction coming from its design, its composition, its color, or a combination of elements.

As you view them you first are struck by the diversity of materials of which they are constructed. One normally doesn't expect to find a basket made from hog casings but there they are, and they are stunning.

Or who would have thought that a basket could or would be constructed so that it doesn't, won't or can't hold anything. After all, baskets are supposed to hold things—aren't they?

Well aren't they? And then you have it. Then you begin to question yourself and your concept of what a basket is supposed to be. And then something wonderful happens—learning takes place.

No longer is a basket just a basket. It must now be thought of as, well, as anything that the imagination can muster. Just as the many artists have transformed their concepts into three dimensional objects, that process takes a reverse course in our minds. We ingest all of these objects and they stimulate us. They begin to work on and to eventually expand our concept of what a basket is supposed to be.

The result: baskets, as objects, can never be the same, that for granted things that they used to be. We have been forced, seduced, or compelled (take your pick) to place the basket in a new context. We have been made to develop a new vocabulary of seeing.

It is rare indeed when we can truly have the opportunity to view the known in a different setting. And such is the opportunity provided for us by the Virginia Beach Arts Center through its exhibit "The Woven Basket."

Virginia Beach Home And Gardening

Nibble Strawberries

Sun Flower

By Virginia Beach
Extension Agent
Doris Trout

Do Virginia Beach residents know what is the "ideal fast food?" Do they know what foods can save time and energy in the kitchen and also save dollars?

Did you think of fresh fruits and vegetables? That's right! I am talking about delicious fruits and crunchy vegetables as the perfect choices for health-conscious consumers. They are easy to prepare and many can be eaten "as is" making them ideal "fast foods". What can be more convenient or faster than peeling a banana, reaching for an apple or munching on a cluster of grapes. What I really enjoy is a bunch of strawberries to nibble on.

Let me tell you, this is such an exciting rediscovery that national regional home economists are coming to Tidewater on April 7 to do a special program on their secrets and tips on selecting and preparing these fast food items.

One hint that I picked up from a citrus representative was the "Basketball method" of serving an orange. This smart invention of helping small fry in the family solve his peeling problems with an orange. Which by the way is loaded with high vitamin C, an ideal between meal snack or lunch box component. With this method, the orange is scored into quarters like a basketball, but no cutting into the meat, just through the skin portion. This helps because once the skin is scored it pulls right off. There are so many ways to cut and serve an orange; like smiles, cartwheels, and baskets.

I really think that fruits and vegetables need not be limited to the main meal. It makes sense to serve fresh produce throughout the day. For breakfast fresh fruits are eye-openers served sliced over cereal or eaten whole. I just love strawberries and waffles served together, or just about any fruit topping goes well over pancakes and french toast. Or serve a whole hot baked apple or pear sprinkled with cinnamon, sugar, and light cream.

Lunch can include a stocky hot dish like curried vegetables served at home or a fresh item such as a stuffed tomato in a brown bag lunch. Convenience and economy make fresh fruits and vegetables the most practical and nutritious snack food.

Spaghetti squash I think is a fun vegetable to serve for a main course dinner. Relatively new to this area, spaghetti squash looks like spaghetti noodles but has less calories and high in nutrients. And how about Zesty Hot Potato Salad? Potatoes cost just pennies per serving and are one of our most economical sources of thiamine, vitamin C and iron. For dieters, drop the sour cream and butter and use toppings of stewed tomatoes and cheese, chive-spiked yogurt or a mixture of dried herbs (parsley, chives, basil and dill).

Spinach Bisque can be a tasty side dish which is the only way I enjoy spinach.

Fruits and vegetables contribute almost all the vitamin C (92 %) about half the vitamin A and one fourth the vitamin B6 in our diets, as well as important amounts of potassium, phosphorus, niacin, thiamine and iron. And trace elements not found. They really are good buys for your dollar return.

Think about the meals we ate yesterday, the meals we're eating today. Are we really getting the fruits and vegetables we need? For more information drop in and visit "A Fresh Approach" program on April 7, 7 to 9 p.m. at Ramada Inn, New-

items and specialty produce. Call 427-4511 for more information and registration.

The O'Brien Report

Delegate J. W. (Billy) O'Brien, Jr., of Virginia Beach, has pledged to take to the people of Virginia what he calls "the powerful case" for a state lottery.

O'Brien said at a time when the fiscal picture at all levels of government is bleak and there is massive public resistance to new forced taxes, his "voluntary tax bill" would raise about $175 million a year from those who voluntarily participate.

"A state lottery is an idea whose time has come in Virginia," said O'Brien. I am convinced an overwhelming majority of the people favor the concept as a means of raising substantial amounts of new revenue at a time when such revenue is desperately needed."

During this session of the legislature, O'Brien withdrew a state lottery bill after it appeared he could not get a majority of a House of Delegates Committee to vote for it.

He said he will seek through the media and other means to give the people a clear understanding of the many practical and economic reasons which make passage of a state lottery desirable. He is exploring the possibility of forming a "Virginians For A State Lottery" organization.

O'Brien noted that legal lotteries and gambling already exists in Virginia in the form of bingo and raffles, instant and scratch-off games, newspaper baseball and football games, games of chance sponsored by clubs, civic organizations, fast food chains, grocery stores, and others.

Bingo, in particular, said O'Brien, has raised millions of dollars for worthwhile charitable and civic enterprises and he fully supports the concept.

Yet, said O'Brien, "Bingo is not nearly as tightly regulated as a state lottery under direct control of a Virginia lottery commission would be." He said 14 other states have a state-operated lottery and 15 are in the process of implementing such lotteries. Of special interest is the fact most of the 13 original colonies have a state lottery.

Those who object to a lottery on moral and traditional grounds forget that Virginia and other colonies had lotteries in colonial days. The money was used to finance the Virginia Company, build churches, schools, colleges, monuments, canals and for other charitable purposes. The City of Richmond was founded by a lottery and among those prominent Virginians who played lotteries were George Washington, William Byrd II, Col. William Byrd III, Benjamin and Nathaniel Harrison of Berkley and Thomas Adams.

"Those people who react so strongly against a lottery have not had the same view I've had in this session of the General Assembly when day after day, we have heard pleas for more money for the handicapped, education, the elderly, mental health, child care, and dozens of other programs." O'Brien continued, "Unfortunately such pleas cannot be fully answered at a time of reduced federal funds to Virginia and an austere state budget."

O'Brien stated how a lottery could help correct this situation by raising millions of new dollars for Virginia that would go into a General Fund. In Maryland, for example, the lottery nets more money than any other program except for the income taxes. A lottery in Virginia will stave off the necessity for other general tax increases "and will be played only by those who voluntarily choose to participate. Those who, for any reason, object to a lottery simply do not have to participate."

In response to those who contend organized crime might infiltrate a state lottery, O'Brien said this would simply not be the case because of tight controls. "Organized crime has certainly not infiltrated our state-operated system of selling alcoholic beverages and the lottery commission I propose would be just as tightly regulated as the ABC Commission."

place ribbon in children's apparel; and Annette Evans took third in women's apparel.

In the culinary half of the competition, the judges determined there was no first place winners, but two Virginia Beach Vo-Tech food service students captured second place ribbons:

Perry Baldwin, for his marzipan (hand-made candy) and Peggy Haynes for her cake decorating skills.

Third place awards went to Vo-Tech students katers Nash for her quick breads, George Mills for his yeast breads and tea cookies, and a group of four students for their combined creativeness in baking an apple pie.

—Confident Of Reelection—

McCoy Not Ruling Out Running Again For Mayor's Seat

McCoy

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Sailing on the crest of two major political endorsements, Virginia Beach Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr. is confident of reelection on May 4 and is not ruling out the idea of again serving as mayor.

"Yes, I'm confident that I will be reelected to again serve the Kempsville Borough," McCoy, a dentist, said following public endorsements from the 2,400 member Virginia Beach Education Association (VBEA) and the Greater Tidewater Central Labor Council of Virginia, AFL-CIO, Norfolk. The labor organization is the local community service, political and legislative arm of the AFL-CIO, with between 10,000 and 12,000 Virginia Beach members.

If reelected, McCoy's decision to vie again for the mayor's seat will depend on how City Council members mess after the election.

"Right now, I'm not intending to seek the mayor's job," McCoy said, "but I'm not ruling out the possibility."

"It's been hard for me to take the blame for things because Council didn't work well together," McCoy, an eight-year Council member and former vice mayor continued. "I'll have to wait and see what happens, and see if we will have a harmonious group of Council people. I don't particularly want to serve as a compromise mayor again."

McCoy, a former member of the Old Dominion University's Board of Visitors and Tidewater Community College's Board of Directors, first entered political waters in 1974. He opposed Garland Isdell, an insurance executive who had been appointed to the Kempsville seat to fill the unexpired term of Donald Rhodes who was elected to the Virginia House of Delegates. In 1978 McCoy ran unopposed to retain his council seat, after which he became the city's vice mayor from 1978 to 1980. In 1980 McCoy became a "compromise" mayor after Council voted on the matter four separate times.

McCoy enters this year's political race with opposition from five challengers, and a pro-George Hanbury political action special interest group known as Citizens for Effective Government. McCoy has received criticism for the forced resignation of former Virginia Beach City Manager George Hanbury.

"I probably got more slack than anybody for the Hanbury thing," Mc-Coy said. "But I don't back off. I think it was a good decision."

McCoy will campaign hard this Spring, appreciative of his two most recent endorsements. But he will not let them lull him into a false sense of security.

"I'm eager to take any of my opponents heads up on the issues," McCoy said. "I'm not going to rest on the laurels of the endorsements. I'm going to campaign as hard as the first time I ran for office."

The labor council endorsement surprised McCoy more than the VBEA's.

"Last June the Virginia Beach Education Association honored me as a 'Friend of Education'," McCoy said. "I've felt that local educators have been my friends. I believe this city was built on its strong public education system. I'm honored and happy to have received the VBEA's endorsement. I'm really more pleased over the endorsement than surprised."

"I didn't know whether to expect the labor council's endorsement," McCoy continued. "I met with their representatives and discussed Virginia Beach's needs, concerns, and philosophies. I talked with them eyeball to eyeball."

Challenging McCoy this Spring are G. Garland Payne, H. Layton House, Jr., Arthur Riddell and R. Randall Moore. The number of candidates competing for the Kempsville seat will, McCoy feels, be to his advantage.

"In political circles, when an incumbent is opposed by a big field of candidates it usually works to his advantage because the vote becomes watered down," McCoy said. "But that's not to say that I'm not going to campaign as hard as I can. I know there are people who want my seat."

If McCoy loses the upcoming election he wouldn't embrace too warmly the idea of running later again.

"If I lost, naturally it would bother me," McCoy admitted. "It would hurt my feelings but I wouldn't go in a cave and hide. I would still want to serve on a city board or something. But if I lost I'd never run again. I'm too sensitive."

What if McCoy is reelected to Council but loses in a bid for the mayor's chair?

"That would not bother me too much," he said. "I know there are a couple of people who have expressed an interest in serving as mayor, but in-house politics will probably determine who that person will be."

Sun Subs Net More Than Candy

"We make more money with subscriptions to the Virginia Beach Sun than we do selling candy bars, baked goods, submarine sandwiches or Christmas trees," said Carolyn Lowenthal, a color guard commander with the Princess Anne High School Band.

"We just went around to our neighbors," Carolyn, the 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Joseph Lowenthal of the King's Forest section of Virginia Beach, continued. "It was easy to get them to subscribe to The Sun."

Thus far, efforts by Princess Anne High School Band and Color Guard members have netted the industrious students an easy $18. They receive $2 for every paid $7 Sun subscription they sell. The money will be used to help finance the band's Canadian trip this Summer to a national high school band festival. For every 500 subscriptions sold, a bonus of $500 will also be given.

Carolyn, a graduating senior, added that selling Sun subscriptions requires less paperwork than other fund raisers, and less interaction with adults.

Also participating in the Virginia Beach Sun subscriber campaign is the Virginia Beach Education Association (VBEA). Sun subscription cards were recently circulated to the Association's 2,400 members via the VBEA newsletter "In The Know." The newsletter also contained an article explaining to readers the Sun subscriber plan.

Already, $18 has been raised which will be placed exclusively in the VBEA's Student Enrichment Scholarship Fund.

The Ocean Park Woman's Club is also participating in The Sun subscription campaign.

Virginia Beach groups, organizations, or churches interested in raising funds through participation in the Virginia Beach Sun subscriber campaign are invited to call 466-3430 or 547-4571 for more information.

The Sun rebates are intended for Virginia Beach charities, scholarships, foundations, community beautification projects or other non-profit community-betterment ventures.

Bayside Baseball Looks Strong In Beach District

Beach Sports Beat

By Ronnie Greene and Joey Carothers

To hear Bayside softball coach Morag Nocher talk, one may get the impression that her Lady Marlins are just a runner in the pack in the Beach District.

"I expect to do well this year," Nocher recently said. With 13 players and nine regulars returning from last year's state semi-finalist team, her pre-season prediction may be a bit of an understatement.

Last year, the Lady Marlins finished 16-3, while winning both the Beach District and Eastern Regional championships.

And the cast that returns this year should be well-equipped to at least match last season's totals.

Senior pitcher Kelley Little heads the talented Bayside unit. As a junior, Little was a First Team All-Beach District selection.

Kelley's twin sister, Shelley, is also a Lady Marlin standout, and was a Second Team All-Beach District third baseman a year ago.

Two other girls, centerfielder Sabrina Martinez (who played rightfield last season) and catcher Gail Elliot, were also on the All-Beach District Second Team last year.

Nocher is also high on junior second-baseman Shirley Miller and sophomore pitcher Traci Strickland.

"We do have a lot of talent," the veteran coach noted.

But even with all of her coaching experience and the softball talent on hand, Nocher is not overly optimistic. In fact, she feels her Bayside team may have a hard time repeating last year's championship season, because of teams such as Cox and First Colonial.

"The Cox team this year should be very strong," Nocher said, "because they have alot of good returning pitchers and also have the (Gay) Dunton girl.

"Also, First colonial has a talented bunch of girls this year," she added.

One thing the other schools don't have that Bayside does is a very strong winning tradition in softball.

The Lady Marlins have won both the District and Regional championships four out of the last five years and have also advanced to the state semi-finals three out of the last four years.

Another very good thing going for Bayside is Nocher, who has coached the Lady Marlins in each of the six years they have had a girls softball team.

"We do have a real strong tradition here at Bayside," she said.

But even with the strong winning feeling that Bayside has acquired through the years, Nocher still declines to boast about her teams' chances for the upcoming season.

"Who knows?" she said, "We may win again this year, because there have been some years that we've done better than we expected."

Nocher's understatements aside, Bayside turns the strongest Beach District softball team in 1982, and everyone, including Nocher, should expect them to repeat as champions.

Greene Included Journalists Win

Five Virginia Beach journalism students were winners in the 1981 High School Journalism Contest sponsored by the Daily Press, Inc., Landmark Publications, and Virginia Press Women.

Four of the students were from Bayside High—Shelly Mitchell, Chris Killer, Charlotte Hunt, and Kim Cash. The fifth, Ronnie Greene, a Virginia Beach Sun writer, was from Kellam High.

The five received their awards at a special luncheon held recently in Hampton.

Mitchell received a second place in the editorial category for her article, "Pomp wins due to circumstance," in the Bayside High school newspaper, "Shore Lines." Killer received a third place in the editorial category for the article, "Off the streets into the bars." Hunt's front-page article, with photos, entitled "Shoplifting booms during holidays," won a third place in the news category, and Cash's tongue-in-cheek feature, "Turkey tells birds-eye view of holidays," placed second in the feature category.

Greene's lead story in the December Kellam High "Round Table," entitled "Basketball team makes history with openers," won a second place award in the news category.

Linda Cobb is the journalism teacher and newspaper sponsor at Bayside High, while Mrs. Flo Blankenship is the journalism teacher and newspaper sponsor at Kellam High.

Greene's Reaction

Virginia Beach Sun Sports writer Ronnie Greene had the following reaction to winning an award in the 1981 High School Journalism Contest.

"It means a lot to me Ronnie said." It gives me a feeling of pride and makes me feel good about my work. I hope it will help me later on in life with my career."

Ronnie is in his second year of studying journalism at Kellam High School. He is a former editor and chief of the high school newspaper "Round Table." He currently serves as staff writer and layout editor. He plans to attend VCU in the Fall.

"I was very surprised that my sports story won the award," Ronnie said, "I thought they might have chosen an editorial on football I had written."

The contest was sponsored by the Daily Press, Inc., Landmark Publications, and Virginia Press Women.

Correction

In the March 17 edition of the Virginia Beach Sun, it was reported that Kellam High School has never had a losing baseball season under Coach Wayne Sykes. In his first two seasons coaching Kellam, Sykes' teams had losing records.

Bills Die; Let Cops Know You Appreciate Them

Editor:

I was sorry to read in the Virginia Beach Sun, 3/17/82, that the two General Assembly bills introduced by Virginia Beach Senator A. Joseph Canada and Henrico County Senator William A. Parkerson were killed.

These were two important bills. They would have stopped some of the assaults that are made on our police officers. These men and women are doing a job and should not have to be assaulted by the people they arrest.

If a person will assault a police officer who is armed, he or she would also attack you or me.

A person who has no regard for the law, is a person who should be punished with more than a small fine, when they assault a police officer.

These people protect us. They even do so if it puts them in a position of being killed.

They get very little thanks for the job they do. People call them names, assault them and still they do their job.

If these bills had passed, it would have been a way of saying thanks to some fine men and women for a good job.

I thank Senator S. Canada and Parkerson, for introducing these bills and I hope they will get so again next year and keep on doing so until we get our police officers some protection from these assaults.

In the future I hope the judges put some of these people in jail. Maybe this would make them think before assaulting our police officers.

The people of Virginia Beach, should support their police. Let them know that we appreciate the fine job they do. Why not write a letter to The Sun, telling them you support them. It sure would be a terrible place, if they weren't out there trying to protect us.

Reader To Quit Reading Sun Because Of Sands' Column

Editor:

I've been hoping that I wouldn't have to write this. I hoped somebody else would or that you would notice.

Lynn Sands' "Sun Down" writing is so bad that I don't ever want to read your paper again. Each week she tells us about "my date and I" like we all care if she can get one. This week it was five times already. It's the same story every week...everything and everybody is great. All the first names mean nothing to most of us. Who cares if Ethel and Cindy and Crystal and Wayne and Anne and Billy and Curtis did anything? Lynn is only stroking her friends and the bar owners who must be putting up free drinks and admission.

Count me out of the stupid and helpless readers who face her story each week. Why not get her to do her job and tell us what's happening without all the name dropping to satisfy her friends' egos and maintain her "date's" companionship? I've been to all the joints she writes about, and none of them are interesting enough to plug each week. Unless you're in the same rut that she is and don't see beyond the ego boosts she gives. I've never met or seen Lynn, and I think I'm glad of it.

You are a good editor and writer. Straighten her out because only her friends are smiling. The rest of us are laughing.

To show you how dumb not using last names is, I'll just sign it:

A Virginia Beach resident

Sands Loves The Beach, Does Not Get Freebies

Editor:

Please allow me to divulge a few facts about Lynn Sands. Lynn is neither employed by nor paid by the Virginia Beach Sun for the Sun Down column. Lynn is not a professional writer, and the nightlife has nothing to do with what Lynn does during the day as a private citizen. The nightlife is merely Lynn's hobby, and Lynn writes the column as a contribution to the community.

The restaurant owners and nightclub owners do not know Lynn. We pay admissions. We pay for meals. We have never gotten one drink for free. The people we see do not know Lynn. We do not know them.

Lynn believes Virginia Beach is the best place in the world in which to live. Lynn is a positive person who appreciates the people who party and enjoy the life and nightlife, and says so. Negativism gets no sympathy from Lynn. At a time when society is economically depressed Lynn maintains that people brought together by food, fun, and music keep their spirits high. Their togetherness weaves optimism in an often depressing social fabric. Lynn loves the beach and loves promoting the music, people, and places that make it what it is. Sun Down's reward for Lynn is the opportunity to share this love.

Beach Crime Corner

By Virginia Beach Police Sergeant Danny Kappert

What's It Like Being A Cop?

The word COP means different things to different Virginia Beach residents. To some it symbolizes authority and to others it means repression. Regardless of one's interpretation of the word, human emotion is rarely associated with it. The reason, to some degree, may be the "tough guy" image that most police officers consciously or unconsciously project.

This projected image is a defense mechanism that most of us (police officers) adopt. It builds a protective wall between reality and our emotions. Fortunately this wall is penetrated from time to time. If it were not we wouldn't be human. Police work is life in the "fast lane." No two days are alike and one can never predict what each day may bring. Some days are tedious and boring while others are fast and exciting.

Unfortunately the exciting days are ones which usually show human beings at their worst. Husbands and wives fighting, siblings and parents fighting, child abuse, child molestation, homicide, rape and automobile fatalities. They may be exciting but they take their emotional toll on the most seasoned police officer.

To be a Cop means being vomited on by a drunk, spit on by deviant and lawless persons, physically abused by those who are not respecters of authority and, in some cases maimed or killed. An officer cannot help but be hardened by these situations. How many times does an officer hear from a traffic violator that the police department must have better things to do than pick on good tax paying citizens. The hardening process continues.

Hard? sure we are! It means nothing to us to have to go to the home of a 16 year old girl, whose father passed away only a year ago, to tell her mother that the most beautiful person in her life has been killed in an automobile accident. The horror and immediate denial on the part of the mother causes a cop no pain, if the tears in his eyes and the headache doesn't count. Yeah, we're hard.

Several years ago I had a rather small 11 year old boy crawl into my lap and admit to playing with his father's shotgun which had resulted in the death of his 8 year old sister. He wanted me to reassure him that his father and mother would still love him. Between his tears and my own I realized that this job would never harden me to human misery and for that I thanked God.

A police officer hides behind two shields. One is metal and is the symbol of the authority entrusted to him by the community. The other hides his emotions... most of the time.

Virginia Beach Style

Both Bring Pleasure

Will And Cookies

Second Opinion

By
Sam Clay

I wish that I had invented sunshine. Imagine how satisfying it would be to know that something you created brought such pleasure to millions and millions of people. But I didn't.

I also wish that I had invented chocolate chip cookies. To my way of thinking, they are truly one of life's necessities - next, in order, to air, water, etc. But I didn't. (In case you're interested, a Massachusetts restaurant called the Toll House Inn first studded cookies with bits of chocolate and claims the prize for inventing them).

I really wish, however, that I had invented George F. Will. A columnist for "Newsweek" and the "Washington Post" syndicate, Will writes wonderful columns and essays. A number of them have been collected and published in a book entitled "The Pursuit of Virtue and Other Tory Notions."

It's been quite some time since I have enjoyed a book as much. In fact, because of this, I have done something that book lovers would find unpardonable: I have underlined particularly pithy, cogent and, above all, incisive lines.

Even though I can't take credit for them, I can at least share some of them with you.

In a column entitled "...America's Flaccid Consensus" Will states (p. 31/32): Modern politics emphasizes the sameness, not the diversity, of people. It seeks to found stable societies on the lowest, commonest, strongest passion: self-interest that is tamed by being turned to economic pursuits.

He has hit the proverbial nail on the proverbial head - in two sentences explaining to all willing to read and heed what has happened to our political system and, in turn, the way this system affects - negatively - our economy.

Stereotypes and labels appear to be a way of life for most Americans. We like to group people and "things" into categories, usually based upon whether or not we agree with or like the people or thing. George Will, however, comments on this from this perspective: Labels identify classes; but people, by acting, classify themselves. (p. 39)

Will evidences little love for television. He refers to T.V. programming as "junk food for the mind" (p. 69). Summing up his position on the impact of television, he concludes: The twentieth century did not invent vulgarity, but it did invent sophisticated technologies such as television, that are often used for the commercial exploitation of vulgarity. A wise man has wondered, "Is it progress if a cannibal uses knife and fork?" (p. 71).

"In Pursuit Of Virtue In Other Tory Notions" By George Will

One can mine "The Pursuit of Virtue and Other Tory Notions" for days and each time come up with a golden nugget. Simplicity is the basis for that which is classic. A sample, then, of his best one-liners:

- If life is getting better, why are people spending more and more on distractions.
- Experience, some people say, is like a light on a caboose, illuminating only where we aren't going.
- The Supreme Court has closed for the summer so the Constitution is safe until October.
- Excesses happen when the masses make laws by referendum.
- As Mark Twain said, confession is good for the soul but bad for the reputation.
- Coercion compels, incentives encourage.
- Some people are punished for their sins, others by their sins.

By now I assume you understand that I really like this book and think that you would, too. It is thought provoking, funny, sad, but - usually satisfying. Whether you are nodding your head in agreement or reacting negatively to what he's saying, you know that you are reacting to ideas and thoughts of substance.

His style is elegant yet direct, at times ponderous yet light. He carries you with him effortlessly. So, I didn't invent sunshine. And I didn't create chocolate chip cookies. But if I have turned you on to the George Will, then I'm happy and content.

VIRGINIA BEACH BUSINESS REVIEW

Balloon Antics Offers Balloon Service With A Personal Touch!

Ellen Koebel has a philosophy: "People are special...they make a difference."

Ellen has put her philosophy into practical use in her balloon business, located in her home behind the College Park Square Shopping Center. Instead of TELLING prospective customers what she can do for them, she ASKS them what they want, and then she does her best to fill the order.

Ellen started in the balloon business about a year ago (with Balloon Artistry) and opened Balloon Antics in June of 1981. She has three "Costumed Characters" to help her: Fran Mercer, Lynn Peri and Alyce Zwick. Her children help, too. Monica (11), Matt (9) and Marc (6) are experts in blowing up balloons, and they sometimes help mom with inventory.

Ellen's so-called Standard Delivery (used when no one has a special request) consists of balloons delivered by Costumed Characters dressed in bib overalls painted with balloons and bows.

Their favorite specialty is Balloons And A Tune, in which the Costumed Characters sing a song written for a special occasion and a special person.

Balloon Antics also offers special features like Playboy Bunny Deliveries, Clown Deliveries (with or without painted faces), or Black Balloon Deliveries (30-40 black balloons presented in "funeral" style for traumatic events like a 30th or 40th birthday).

Mercer and Koebel

They can also provide decorations (for parties, Bar Mitzvahs and weddings), special costumes for holidays and Jack-In-The-Box balloons for mailing.

"We provide special balloon service for everyone in the Tidewater area," Ellen adds. "Give us a call at 420-6152 and tell us what you have in mind. We'll get back to you promptly with a time schedule and a price."

Beach Boxer Pounds Foe

Ric "The Virginia Beach Bomber" Lainhart dropped the bomb on Las Vegas' Charles Royce at 1:20 in the first round.

The "Cowboy," as Royce was billed, boxed over 20 professional fights. His record was 12-9. Lainhart, employed with the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, was making only his fourth professional appearance. His record is 4-0.

The Bomb Was Dropped

"I'm going to send the cowboy to Boot Hill," Lainhart said before the fight, held recently in the Norfolk Arena.

"I'm going to drop the bomb in the fourth," he continued.

He dropped it in the first, after a few seconds of flurries and bobs and weaves. Lainhart unloaded with a right and Royce went down. He didn't get up for several minutes. Doctors were rushed to the ring, uncertain if Royce has sustained serious injury.

Lainhart also added before the fight that he expected Royce to be his strongest opponent yet.

The fights were promoted by Contact Sports, Inc., Jerry Martins, president.

Virginia Beach Nightlife

Dancing Don Returns To Rogues

Sun
DownBy
LYNN
SANDS*Lynn and date brave nippy winds, seek out warm nightlife*

The first week of Spring was a bit nippy, but there were plenty of people getting their buns warmed by some hot rock and roll. Wednesday my date and I went to Rogue's where Power Play was in performance. "Superfreak" brought squeals of pleasure from the delighted ladies. This particular evening was marked by the return of Dancing Don who put the ladies in the mood for the men at ten. Warren Beatty was there, and Peggy was back in town from wherever she got that tan.

Down the street at Pascal's a nice crowd turned out to welcome the return of Hot Cakes to the griddle. After a much deserved vacation these fabulous flapjacks were springing back into action with some potential top ten hits by the Producers like "What You Do To Me." Rarely do you see more people dancing than sitting. Much to the shock of his fans lead singer Dave Britt shaved his moustache while away.

Thursday night Pascal's was packed. Anybody who needs room to dance should go on Wednesday. Herb and Carol were partying, Bonnie was celebrating her birth, and the Rogues and the Raven rascals were revving the engines on their feet. If you're lucky, you might catch Steve Arcese joining the band for Peabo Bryson's "Falling In Love." A little syrup never hurt Hot Cakes.

For dinner on Friday my date and I went sailing for the Lighthouse. Our waitress was Cindy. She was very friendly and exceptionally efficient. It was almost as if she was reading our minds. The turtle soup was extremely tasty with a snappy flavor, but the turtle refused to stick out its head among the mass of carrots. We also tried the famous she crab soup which was succulent, but it had enough shell to keep a beachcomber busy. The crabmeat cocktail, however, had absolutely no shell. It was fresh, cold, and scrumptious, and was served with a hot, tangy cocktail sauce. The scallops were huge, rich, and real. They were excellent and were served with broccoli that was cooked to perfection. The pina colada was the best we ever had and was liberally laced with freshly shaved coconut. The mai tai was a powerhouse punch. Both drinks could have used larger straws.

Sunday night my date and I caught the first beach music night of the season at Rogue's. It proved to be a doubleheader. Bill Deal and the Rhondells were there to open the season with their great beach tunes that defy the sands of time. Just when everyone was mellowing in their revelry a different band took the stage and surprised everybody. It was a sneak preview of Infinity, a six person group featuring two female performers. After rocking through a set that included "I Like the Night Life," "Harden My Heart," "Our Lips Are Sealed," and "We Got The Beat" they were gone, but not before dropping the jaws of the audience which was riveted with disbelief by the sudden onslaught of Go-Go's music played live in Rogue's. It was an incredible transformation. See you after the Sun goes down.

Beach's Growing Season Longest In Va.

Sun Flower

By Virginia Beach
Extension Agent
Randy Jackson

According to a nationwide survey sponsored by Gardens for All, the National Association for Gardening, more Americans planted vegetable gardens in 1981 than ever before. They reported that some 38 million American households planted food gardens in 1981, an unprecedented increase of four million households over 1980.

In addition to regular vegetable gardens, seven million households grew some vegetables in containers. The typical garden size is 547 sq. ft., down from the 1980 size of 663 sq. ft., reflecting the tendency of new gardeners to start small.

Translated into retail value, home garden production was worth $16 billion. This does not include the economic impact of sales related to gardening such as seeds, rototillers, and canning jars.

Saving money, better tasting food, and enjoyment are listed by gardeners as their principal reasons for gardening. Vegetable gardening is the fifth most popular leisure pursuit in America out of 32 activities measured.

Virginia Beach season

Virginia Beach has the longest growing season of any location in the state. The last average frost date for us was March 15th. That means we can begin planting some hardy vegetables in late February or early March (weather permitting).

Start making plans now so you will be ready when planting time arrives. If you need assistance in gardening planning, the Virginia Beach Cooperative Extension Service can help. Call 427-4769 and request a copy of Vegetable Gardening for the Beginner. This informative 32 page booklet could save you time and money, and it is free.

Be sure and take advantage of another free service, soil testing. With soil test results you will receive fertilizer and lime recommendations. By applying the correct amounts of fertilizer and lime, your vegetables will get off to a better start and be more productive. Soil samples can be dropped off at any Virginia Beach Library, London Bridge Greenhouse and Nursery or Timberlake Greenhouse and Nursery. Currently we can have test results back to you in 3-4 weeks, but as the planting season approaches this will increase to 4-6 weeks.

There are several new vegetables on the market this year. Two squash varieties made the All-American list for 1982. The summer squash Peter Pan and a summer/winter acorn squash, Jersey Golden.

Jersey Golden was grown here last year on a trial basis. The plants are bush-form, spreading four to five feet across. The plants are heavy producers and the fruits had a unique nutty flavor. I would not recommend a large planting of Jersey Golden since the plants we grew seemed to be very susceptible to squash vine borer.

If you are a fan of the Sugar Snap pea, you might want to try Sugar Bon as a trial planting this year. This new variety is reported to have the same qualities as Sugar Snap except it is more compact and has a higher tolerance to heat.

Men and women have been planting garden seeds for thousands of years with varying degrees of success. You could divide the contents of a seed packet among several gardeners and no two of them would have the same number of seedlings come up.

The difference in success has nothing to do with a green thumb or the lack of it. The secret, in part, is learning to think of seeds as either large, small, or fine.

Peas, beans, corn, sunflowers and zinnias have large seeds. They carry a generous supply of food stored in their tissue. They sprout rapidly and show an endurance in breaking through the soil. Generally, the larger the seed, the greater the tolerance to haphazard planting.

Small seeds vary greatly in speed of sprouting, size of the emerging seedlings, and their rate of growth. Parsley may take three weeks to sprout and then another month to grow into plants as large as a half dollar. Others, such as cabbage, will sprout in four days and can grow into six-inch plants within a month.

Fine seeds are best started indoors and grown into good-sized plants for transplanting to the garden. These tiny seeds grow into seedlings that may be no larger than a dime after four weeks. Outdoor planting of fine seeds requires experience, finess and luck. Fine seeds can be buried or washed away by rains, or killed by dryness when sprouting.

learning how to do something and then teaching others is a way to self-confidence and personal esteem. And that is what 4-H gives to more than 175,000 Virginia youngsters each year.

Youngsters, who can start in 4-H at about the age of nine, are introduced to a wide variety of activities including photography, business, bicycle safety, small engines, clothing and grooming, natural resources and much more. And it is a part of 4-H to take the information they learn and use it to teach others in demonstrations.

Youngsters in Virginia Beach, said Kenneth E. Dawson, director of 4-H in Virginia, are introduced to 4-H either in a community group or in school. A community group is a bunch of neighborhood kids who get together in a home and begin to work on some project.

A school group is organized in much the same way, but meets in the school classroom either before or after regular school hours and usually involves a teacher as the club leader.

Youngsters in one of these groups will get involved in a project. Often the first one is "An Introduction to 4-H," an outline of what 4-H is. It explains the clover symbol; the meaning of the four Hs—head, heart, hands and health; the pledges to the flag and 4-H; and the motto—"To Make the Best Better."

to practice leadership.

4-H is known for its projects. Some projects—learning experiences—are group efforts. A group just starting may make a bulletin board for the school classroom or for the home. 4-H'ers may choose from among the more than 130 projects available through the Virginia Cooperative Extension office. If there is a special project in which members are interested they try to find someone who will volunteer to teach them about it.

"These volunteers who teach the youngsters everything from clock repair to raising chickens are one of the most vital parts of the 4-H program," said Dawson. There are more than 10,000 volunteer 4-H leaders working with Virginia youngsters.

agents or their volunteer leader.

The major kinds of projects are: animal, plant and soil science; creative and performing arts; leisure education and communications; economics, jobs and careers; environment and natural resources; health and safety; home and family resources; leadership, citizenship and community development; mechanical science and energy. Under each of these topics are specific projects.

The projects start from the elementary and introductory nature and progress, gradually, to the more complex to give the youngsters the background necessary to complete more and more sophisticated activities in the project.

tricity...then the youngster tells the others in the group how to do it...giving a practical demonstration, showing when possible."

This is a vital part of the youngsters' development, Dawson said. Once they get practice doing this, they develop a self-confidence so will help them in all their endeavors. The leaders and Extension agents truly work to help the youngsters reach this stage of development.

One way of helping them is to give them more experience as a leader. This is done in the teen-leader program. The teen-leaders will help with some of the 4-H groups and some projects so will help them get the experience of leadership and enhance their own personal development too.

The teen leaders, along with the volunteer leaders, Extension agents, in some cases Extension specialists, and parents all work together in the 4-H program.
